

Wilmington Centinel,

AND GENERAL ADVERTISER.

W E D N E S D A Y, AUGUST 20, 1788.

IN CONVENTION Of the State of NORTH-CAROLINA.

Hillsborough, August 1, 1788.

The order of the day for taking up the report of the committee of the whole convention, on the proposed constitution for the government of the United States of America, was called for, and read: Whereupon, the said report was taken up and read in the following words:—

Resolved: That a declaration of rights, asserting and securing from inviolation the great principles of civil and religious liberty, and the inalienable rights of the people, together with amendments to their fundamental and exceptionable parts of the said constitution of government, ought to be laid before congress, and the convention of the states that shall or may be called for the purpose of amending the said constitution, for their consideration, previous to the ratification of the constitution aforesaid, on the part of the state of North-Carolina.

DECLARATION of RIGHTS.

1. That there are certain natural rights of which men, when they form a social compact, cannot deprive or divest their posterity—among which are the enjoyment of life and liberty, with the means of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness and safety.

2. That all powers are naturally vested in, and consequently derived from the people—the magistrates therefore, are their trustees and agents, and at all times amenable to them.

3. That government ought to be instituted for the common benefit, protection and security of the people; and that the doctrine of non-resistance against arbitary power and oppression is absurd, slavish and destructive to the good and happiness of mankind.

4. That no man, or set of men, are entitled to exclusive or separate public emoluments or privileges from the community, but in consideration of public services, which not being descendible ought to be common to all; and that the offices of magistrate, legislator, or judge ought to be separate and distinct, and that the members thereof ought to be restrained from oppression, by feeling and bearing the public burdens, they should, at stated and reasonable times, be reduced to a private station, return into the mass of the people, and vacancies be supplied by certain and regular elections, in which all or any part of the former members to be eligible or ineligible, as the rules of the constitution of government shall direct.

5. That elections of representatives in the legislature ought to be free and frequent; and all men having sufficient evidence of permanent common interest with and attachment to the community, ought to have the right of suffrage—and no aid, charge, tax, or fee can be set, rated, or levied on the people without their own consent, or that of their representatives so elected, nor can they be bound by any law to which they have not in the like manner assented for the public good.

6. That all power of suspending laws, or the execution of laws, by any authority, without the consent of the representatives of the people, is injurious to their rights, and ought not to be exercised.

7. That in all capital and criminal prosecutions, a man hath a right to demand the cause and nature of his accusation—to be confronted with the accusers and witnesses—to call for evidences and be allowed counsel in his favour—and to a fair and speedy trial by an impartial jury of his vicinage, without whose unanimous consent he cannot be found guilty (except in the government of land and naval forces) nor can he be compelled to give evidence against himself.

8. That no freeman ought to be taken, imprisoned, or disfranchised, or in any manner destroyed or deprived of his life, liberty or property but by the law of the land.

9. That every freeman restrained of his liberty is entitled to a remedy to enquire into the lawfulness thereof, and to remove the same, if unlawful, and that such remedy ought not to be denied nor delayed.

10. That in controversies respecting property, and in suits between man and man, the ancient trial by jury is one of the greatest securities to the rights of the people, and ought to remain sacred and inviolable.

11. That every freeman ought to find a certain remedy by recourse to the laws, for all injuries and wrongs he may receive in his person, property, or character. He ought to obtain right and justice freely without sale, completely and without denial, promptly and without delay, and that all establishments or regulations contravening these, are oppressive and unjust.

12. That excessive bail ought not to be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

13. That every freeman has a right to secure from all unreasonable searches and seizures of his person, his papers, and property: all warrants, therefore, to search suspected places, or seize any freeman, his papers or property, without information upon oath (or affirmation of a person religiously scrupulous of taking an oath) of legal and sufficient cause, are grievous and oppressive, and all general warrants to search suspected places, or to apprehend any suspected person without specially naming or describing the place or person, are dangerous and ought not to be granted.

15. That the people have a right peaceably to assemble together to consult for the common good, or to instruct their representatives; and that every freeman has a right to petition or apply to the legislature for redress of grievances.

16. That the PEOPLE HAVE A RIGHT TO FREEDOM OF SPEECH, and of WRITING and PUBLISHING THEIR SENTIMENTS—THAT THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IS ONE OF THE GREATEST BULWARKS OF LIBERTY, AND OUGHT NOT TO BE VIOLATED.

17. That the people have a right to keep and bear arms—that a well regulated militia composed of the body of the people, trained to arms, is the proper, natural, and safe defence of a free state—that standing armies in time of peace, are dangerous to liberty, and therefore ought to be avoided, as far as the circumstances and protection of the community will admit; and that in all cases, the military should be under strict subordination to, and governed by the civil power.

18. That no soldier in time of peace, ought to be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, and in time of war in such manner only as the law directs.

19. That any person religiously scrupulous of bearing arms, ought to be exempted upon payment of an equivalent to employ another to bear arms in his stead.

20. That religion, or the duty which we owe to our creator and the manner of discharging it can be directed only by reason and conviction, not by force or violence, and therefore all men have an equal, natural, and unalienable right to the free exercise of religion, according to the dictates of conscience, and that no particular or religious sect or society ought to be favoured or established by law in preference to others.

AMENDMENTS to the Constitution.

1. THAT each state in the union shall respectively retain every power, jurisdiction, and right which is not by this constitution delegated to the Congress of the United States of America, or the departments of the federal government.

2. That there shall be one representative for every 30,000 according to the enumeration or census mentioned in the constitution, until the whole number of representatives amounts to two hundred; after which that number shall be continued or increased as Congress shall direct, upon the principles fixed in the constitution, by apportioning the representatives of each state to some greater number of people from time to time, as population encreases.

3. When Congress shall lay direct taxes or excises, they shall immediately inform the executive power of each state, of the quota of such state, according to the census herein directed, which is proposed to be thereby raised: and if the legislature of any state shall pass a law, which shall be effectual for raising such quota at the time required by Congress, the taxes and excises laid by Congress shall not be collected in such state.

4. That the members of the senate and house of representatives shall be ineligible to, and incapable of holding any civil office under the authority of the United States, during the time for which they shall respectively be elected.

5. That the journals of the proceedings of the senate and house of representatives shall be published at least once in every year, except such parts thereof relating to treaties, alliances, or military operations, as in their judgment require secrecy.

6. That a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of the public money shall be published at least once in every year.

7. That no commercial treaty shall be ratified without the concurrence of two thirds of the whole number of the members of the senate: and no treaty ceding, contracting, refraining or suspending the territorial rights or claims of the United States or any of them, or their or any of their rights or claims to fishing in the American seas, or navigating the American rivers shall be made but in cases of the most urgent and extreme necessity; nor shall any such treaty be ratified without the concurrence of three-fourths of the whole number of the members of both houses respectively.

8. That no navigation law, or law regulating commerce, shall be passed without the consent of two-thirds of the members present in both houses.

9. That no standing army or regular troops shall be raised or kept up in time of peace, without the consent of two-thirds of the members present in both houses.

10. That no soldier shall be enlisted for any longer term than four years, except in time of war, and then for no longer term than the continuance of the war.

11. That each state respectively shall have the power for providing for organizing, arming, and disciplining its own militia, whenever Congress shall omit or neglect to provide for the same. That the militia shall not be subject to martial law, except when in actual service in time of war, invasion, or rebellion. And when not in the actual service of the United States, shall be subject to such fines, penalties, and punishments as shall be inflicted by the laws of its own state.

12. That Congress shall not declare any state to be in rebellion without the consent of at least two-thirds of all the members present of both houses.

13. That the exclusive power of legislation given to Congress over the federal town and its adjacent district, and other places purchased, or to be purchased by Congress of any of the states, shall extend only to such regulations as respect the police and good government thereof.

14. That no person shall be capable of being President of the United States, for more than eight years in any term of sixteen years.

15. That the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and in such courts of admiralty as Congress may from time to time ordain and establish in any or the different states. The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity, arising under treaties made, or which shall be made under the authority of the United States—to all cases affecting ambassadors, other foreign ministers and consuls—to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction—to controversies to which the United States shall be a party—to controversies between two or more states, and between parties claiming lands under the grants of different states.—In all cases affecting ambassadors, other foreign ministers and consuls, and those in which the state shall be a party, the supreme court shall have original jurisdiction; in all other cases beforementioned, the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction as to matter of law only, except in cases of equity, and of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, in which the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make. But the judicial power of the United States shall extend to no case when the cause of action shall have originated before the ratification of this constitution, except in disputes between states about their territory—disputes between persons claiming lands under the grants of different states—and suits for debts due to the United States.

16. That in criminal prosecutions, no man shall be restrained in the exercise of the usual and accustomed right of challenging or excepting to the jury.

17. That Congress shall not alter, modify, or interfere in the times, places, or manner of holding elections for senators and representatives, or either of them, except when the legislature of any state shall neglect, refuse, or be disabled by invasion or rebellion, to prescribe the same.

18. That those clauses which declare that Congress shall not exercise certain powers, be not interpreted in any manner whatsoever, to extend the powers of Congress, but that they be construed either as making exceptions to the specified powers, where this shall be the case, or otherwise, as inserted merely for greater caution.

19. That the laws ascertaining the compensation of senators and representatives, for their services, be postponed in their operation, until after the election of representatives immediately succeeding the passing thereof, that excepted which shall be first passed on the subject.

20. That some tribunal other than the senate, be provided for trying impeachments of senators.

21. That the salary of a Judge shall not be increased or diminished during his continuance in office, otherwise than by general regulations of salary which may take place, on a revision of the subject at stated periods of no less than seven years, the commencement from the time such salaries shall first be ascertained by Congress.

22. That Congress erect no company of merchants with exclusive advantages of commerce.

23. That no treaties which shall be directly opposed to the existing laws of the United States in Congress assembled, shall be valid until such laws be repealed or made conformable to such treaty, nor shall any treaty be valid which is contradictory to the constitution of the United States.

24. That the latter part of the fifth paragraph of the ninth section of the first article be altered to read thus:—Nor shall vessels bound to a particular state be obliged to enter or pay duties in any other: nor when bound from any one of the states be obliged to clear in another.

25. That Congress shall not directly or indirectly, either by themselves or through the judiciary, interfere with any of the states in the redemption of paper money already emitted, and now in circulation, or in liquidating and discharging the public securities of any of the states; but each and every state shall have the exclusive right of making such laws and regulations for the above purposes as they shall think proper.

26. That Congress shall not introduce foreign troops into the United States without the consent of two-thirds of the members present of both houses.

Mr. Iredel, seconded by Mr. John Skinner, moved, that this report be amended, by striking out all the words of the said report, except the two first, viz. "Resolved that," and that the following words be inserted in their room, viz.

This Convention having fully deliberated on the Constitution proposed for the future government of the United States of America, by the Federal Convention lately held at Philadelphia, on the seventeenth day of September last, and having taken into their serious and solemn consideration, the present critical situation of America, which induces them to be of opinion, that though certain amendments to the said constitution may be wished for, yet that those amendments should be proposed subsequent to the ratification of the part of this state, and not previous to it: They DO, therefore, on behalf of the state of North-Carolina, and the good people thereof, and by virtue of the authority to them delegated, RATIFY the said Constitution on the part of this state. And they do at the same time recommend, that as early as possible the following amendments to the said Constitution, may be proposed for the consideration and adoption of the several states in the Union, in one of the modes prescribed by the fifth article thereof.

AMENDMENTS.

1. EACH state in the Union shall respectively retain every power, jurisdiction and right, which is not by this constitution