

In the City of New York
March 1760.

LONDON, November 5.
We are credibly informed that his late royal highness the duke of Cumberland made a will previous to his late German expedition; and, when his highness was under some chirurgical operations last year at Newmarket, on account of the breaking out of the old wound which he received at the battle of Dettingen, a long codicil was annexed, in which, it is said, provision was made for all his royal highness's domestics.

When the melancholy news of the duke of Cumberland's death reached Windsor town, it was received with the utmost concern by all ranks of people, and especially by the labourers on his royal highness's works, who cried out, they had lost their bread. It is said that, when a certain distinguished nobleman in your service told the duke, that he could very well do without such a number of workmen, who cost him a prodigious sum, his royal highness replied, But can these poor people do without me?—An answer worthy the benevolent heart that gave utterance to it.

Nov. 8. The last instance of a demerit in the royal family, in the same degree of kindred to the crown as his late royal highness the duke of Cumberland, was the bishop of Osnaburg, uncle to King George II. which was taken in a precedent or a court mourning, only on the present occasion. But no sooner were proper representations made to his Majesty, that the death of his subjects was to express their common regard to his royal highness's memory by a like token, and that great numbers in trade had already deeply interested themselves on the occasion, than orders were graciously issued out for a GENERAL mourning:—A mark of consideration and goodness that will undoubtedly be remembered to his Majesty's lasting honour.

We are well assured, that the gentlemen who opened the body of his late royal highness the Duke of Cumberland, found in the right ventricle of the brain a coagulation of extravasated blood, about the bigness of a pigeon's egg. All the other parts were found good, except an ossification of the membrane that divides the lobes of the head. His highness had been afflicted with an hydrocele in the scrotum, from which a quart of water had been taken.

The disorder which ended the life of one of the best of princes, was that called the Somnolency.

It is said that his late royal highness the duke of Cumberland had formed a plan, a little before his death, for building and endowing a military hospital near Windsor, for the reception and maintenance of fifty six hundred soldiers, who had served under him, in his campaigns in Germany and near the battle of Culloden.

BOSTON, December 19 7's.

Yesterday his Excellency the Governor, with the Advice of the Council, was pleased to issue a PROCLAMATION, the Substance of which is as follows: VIZ

WHEREAS his Excellency General GAGE has transmitted to me a Copy of a Declaration made and recorded in the Superior Court of the Province of Louisiana, delivered by Mrs. Denoyer, widow of Mr. Denoyer, on the 21st Day of October 1755, setting forth, That her late Husband the Sieur Anthony Denoyer, took on board his Sloop at Samana, two Englishmen, being Part of the Crew of an English Schooner, consisting of seven Men, that had been cast away at Ipar-Point, about 50 Leagues distant from Samana, in order to land them at the mouth, in his Way to Cape-François:—That one of the said Men went by the Name of Capt. John (perhaps Jones, or some such Name; though it is possible John was only the Captain's Christian Name) and the other by that of Young—That her said Husband, on or about the 4th of September last, parted with two French sailors, in Dependence upon the Assistance of the said two Englishmen in navigating his Vessel.—That there were then on board her said Husband's Sloop, herself and two Children, one a Boy about 7 Years old, the other a sucking Child, and her Negroe Woman named Catharine.—That being anchored at a Place named the Gos Gry, a League above Pointe Platte, they went to sleep; but between 3 and 4 in the Morning she heard a violent Blow on her Husband's Bed, adjoining to her's, which Blow seemed to her to be that of an Axe, which was followed by a Groan which she knew to be her Husband's: The Englishman called John then rushed on her Bed, holding an Axe, and forbidding her to move, after which he gave her Husband two more Blows and killed him; they threw him overboard the next Morning, and fled, as they said, for New-York.—They then demanded her Keys, to search for Money, but found none.—They after this offered to put her and the Canoe with her two Children and Negroe Woman, and that Young should go along with them to see them safe to the Cape.—That in this unhappy Situation she accepted of the Proposal, and went on into the Canoe except Young, with a Covering, a Wooden Basket, four Eggs and one half of a Hog, with a Tea-Kettle and a Jug holding about four Quarts of Water, she waited eagerly for her Husband's return to Promise; but Young, instead of coming, cut the Painter, and left them to their fate. She saw the Sight of Land, and then the Sloop fled from her; she held the Jug of Water over, let the nit Night, and was in the Canoe for 6 Days without knowing where she was, and on the 7th descried a Sail, which proved to be John Guyon Maier, who had sailed from Pointe Platte the 1st of September last, bound for New Orleans. She saw the Canoe; the Sloop bore down and took her up, being then about ten Leagues distant from the Land of Guaranam on the Island of Cuba.—The said Capt. John, or Jones, had the right Joint of the right of his left Hand wanting, and the middle Finger cut off; he had light Hair, a round Face, and a fair Complexion; is about 5 Feet 8 Inches high, English Measure. Young is a long thin and fair Face, is very lean, and about 5 Feet 10 Inches high English Measure.

His Excellency thereupon, with the Advice of his Majesty's Council, issued a Proclamation, requiring all Persons, officers, and earnestly desiring that all other his Majesty's good Subjects, would use their utmost Endeavours to discover and apprehend the said John, alias Jones, and the said Young, that Justice may be done on such atrocious offenders as they are reputed to be.
