

The liberty to menace, to oppress, to pillage, to ruin, destruction, is—the liberty of another great nation—of the nation of devils.—All blessings on him, who produces the former! throughout the universe he shall not find a more intrepid defender than the writer of those few lines, the author of this appeal to the great nation, and to posterity, who, God knows, of all earthly blessings, craves none so earnestly as true liberty and equality. Ten thousand curses on him, who diffuses the latter; throughout the universe he shall not find a more intrepid enemy than myself. Open thy eyes great nation, and deliver us from this LIBERTY OF HELL!

To conclude: Do not, great nation, incur the contempt of all future ages; silence these crying acts of injustice, by virtuous atonements. Be not the scourge of nations, the tyrant of humanity, the oppressor of freemen, the bloodsucker of Zurich. Be, what thou wouldst appear, our benefactor, and deserve to rule our hearts.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.

RENEWED INVASION OF IRELAND.

On the morning of Sunday last, the 16th inst. the French national brig Anacron, having on board gen. Rey and James Napper Tandy, chief de brigade, appeared off the little town and island of Rutland, on the north west coast of the county of Donegal, a place so utterly unnoticed, save for its convenience to the herring fishery, as not to be defended by a single soldier. About eight o'clock the crew of the brig landed—they were for the most part Irishmen, and anxiously solicited information concerning the French army landed at Kilala: Nothing could equal their dejection when they were told not only that the whole French force had been destroyed or captured, but that they had been joined by comparatively very few of the Irish rebel friends. Tandy was particularly dejected. The Anacron was laden with many stand of arms to supply those who should join the French army; but such was the caution or the terror of the country people that as soon as the French appeared they retired to the mountains.

Gen. Tandy endeavoured, but with little success, to persuade the fishermen of Rutland, that he and his friends came to deliver them from their oppressors.

The general then issued two manifestoes, in order to convey his meaning more explicitly to the inhabitants of Rutland; these manifestoes, written and printed at Paris, had little or no effect.

Having made no more considerable progress in the course of Sunday than the seizure of some sheep and swine, which the French found in Rutland, generals Rey, Tandy and Blackwell, and sundry other generals who accompanied them, re-embarked on board of the Anacron, out of which not one musket had been landed, and stood away to the north east.

We have obtained copies of proclamations issued at Rutland, which we now insert for the amusement of our readers. They are each headed by an Harp, surmounted by the Cap of Liberty, and bearing the motto of Erin go Bragh.

LIBERTY OR DEATH!

NORTHERN ARMY OF AVENGERS.

Head-quarters, the First year of Irish Liberty.

UNITED IRISHMEN.

THE soldiers of the Great Nation have landed on your coast, well supplied with arms and ammunition of all kinds, with artillery worked by men who have spread terror amongst the ranks of the best troops in Europe. Headed by French officers; they come to break your fetters, and restore you to the blessings of liberty.

James Napper Tandy is at their head. He has sworn to lead them to victory or die. Brave Irishmen, the friends of liberty have left their native soil to assist you in reconquering your rights. They will brave all dangers, and glory at the sublime idea of cementing your happiness with their own blood.

French blood shall not flow in vain: To Arms—Freemen to Arms: the trumpet calls—let not your friends be butchered unassisted: if they are doomed to fall in this most glorious struggle, let their death be useful to you and their bodies serve as footsteps to the temple of Irish liberty.

GEN. REY.

“In the name of the French officers and soldiers now on the coast of Ireland.”

LIBERTY OR DEATH!

NORTHERN ARMY OF AVENGERS.

Head-quarters, the First Year of Irish Liberty.

GEN. J. N. TANDY TO HIS COUNTRYMEN.

UNITED IRISHMEN,

“What do I hear? The British government have dared to speak of concessions! Would you accept of them?”

“Can you think of entering into a treaty with a British minister? A minister too, who has left you at the mercy of an English soldiery, who has laid your cities waste, and massacred inhumanely your best citizens—a minister, the bane of society, and the scourge of mankind—behold Irishmen, he holds in his hand the olive of peace—beware his hand has concealed a dagger with a poisoned point. No, Irishmen, no—you shall not be the dupes of his base intrigues. Unable to induce your courage, he attempts to seduce you, lest his efforts be vain.

“Horrid crimes have been perpetrated in your country:—Your friends have fallen a sacrifice to their devotion for your cause. Their shadows are around you, and call aloud for vengeance.

“It is your duty to avenge their death: It is your duty to strike on their blood-cemented thrones, the murderers of your friends.

“Listen to no proposals, Irishmen; wage a war of extermination against your oppressors—the war of liberty against tyranny, and liberty shall triumph!”

“J. N. TANDY.”

Such is the authentic detail of a circumstance which was yesterday magnified into a new invasion of 25,000 men, landed at Killybeggs, and established in full possession of the county of Donegal!

Blackwell, who accompanied Tandy in this expedition, is a person who was some time ago compelled to fly the county of Clare for seditious practices.

The enemy left with the postmaster of this town a certificate, of which the following is a copy.

Rutland Island, 20th of French Invasion.
“Having landed from on board the Anacron (a republican vessel from the coast of France) on Rutland Island, and being in want (for the time) of accommodations, we were under the necessity of putting the citizen *, postmaster of that town, or island, in requisition, and preventing him from sending off his packets; we at the same time discharged every obligation, and paid for whatsoever we took from the said place.

TANDY, general of brigade, and commander of the expedition.
With 6 other officers.

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE!

It is melancholy to relate the dreadful Conflagration which commenced about sun-rise this morning in this city. It broke out as we learn in the back room of the house of Mr. James Dawe occupied by Mr. John Leod, and raged most tremendously notwithstanding the active exertions of the citizens, and the play of the Fire-Engines, until it destroyed the Houses where it commenced, the Houses of Mr. Charles Purcell, the one occupied by Mr. Cohen, those of Mess. Gray, Denny, and Richardson, that of Mr. McNair the houses of Mess. Mitchell and Gairdner, and the Brick menements occupied by Mr. Hooper and Mr. Inne.—Fortunately the adjoining building to these was brick, and covered with a slate or tile roof; otherwise the whole street as far as the Bridge must have gone on that side, and, not improbably, on both.

We are glad to hear the Mess. Richardson's have pretty generally preserved their stock of jewellery, &c. but we are fearful that great loss has been sustained by some of the whole houses have thus unfortunately been consumed. The houses on the opposite side of the street to that where the fire raged, and which were of wood and old were indeed providentially preserved, and that of Col. Gamble was saved contrary to every expectation, but we yet learn he is likely to sustain considerable loss from the general removal of Goods, &c. from his lumber house and store.—We are not enabled to afford a more accurate account at this time, nor are we able to say whether accident or neglect, or something worse, produced this unfortunate catastrophe.

HALIFAX, Dec.

BANK OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The public will learn with pleasure that the robbers of this bank have been detected, and that the whole sum 158,900 dollars, (excepted about 3000) has been restored to its proprietors. One Davies, a carpenter, in conjunction with one of the porters belonging to the bank, who has since died of the fever, were the only persons concerned in this villainous business. On the death of the porter, Davis, took all the money of which a dividend, it seems had been made, and was detected by the style in which he moved with his coach and pair, pretended to his acquaintances, that an Indian had arrived at New-York, on board of which he had a venture to a considerable amount and by the largeness of the deposits which he had made in some of the banks. He has since made his escape.
