During the days of slavery the negro who would go to the "great house" and tell the white folks all that the other negroes on the plantation had been saying or doing was patied upon the head, called a g od nigger, and given a hot biscuit. The theory is the same now, but the conditi n has changed a little. The News and Ob server contained an untruthful statem nt about Miss Maud E. Young, last Tuesday morning, in which it was alleged that she threatened to whip her assistant music tracher, and when we inquired of the News and Observer reporter as to who was his informant, he promptly and to our surprise, said it was the Rev. (?) R. H. W. Leak. No man prior to the last camprign denounced regroes for tattling to white folks more bitt-rly than ParsonLeak did, but since then the old mark has got in his dotage he has changed his life entirely.
