THIS TIME ESCAPED CONVICT CAPTURES BLOODHOUND

Perry, Ga.—(ANP)—Tired of having bloodhounds capture escaped convicts, one of them, Will McCrary, struck a blow in defense of all convicts last week when he reversed the procedure and captured the bloodhound.

McCrary, a trustee, fled the Houston county chancery. Guards set a bloodhound on his trail. They lost the animal in the swamp as he swiftly chased the fleeing man. Next morning, an overseer on a nearby plantation found the bloodhound securely tied with the convict's suspenders to a fence. The dog was returned to the owners, but the convict is still at large.

Dr. and Mrs. Joe Gregg Have Party For Doctors Rogers and Mills; Dr. Rogers Breaks Arm

(Special to the Carolina Times)—Dr. Clarence Rogers of the Rogers Hospital in Bufiled, W. Va. and Dr. J. N. Mills, of Durham, North Carolina were feted by Dr. and Mrs. Joe Gregg at the St. Louis Municipal Swimming Pool in St. Louis.

As the St. Louis smarter set and scores of beautiful ladies were waiting anxiously for a dive off the diving board, upon introduction of the two honored guests, Dr. Rogers, preceding Dr. Mills, and the diving board, turned to bow, slipped and fell into the pool and broke his left arm. This caused a few minutes of commotion, as Dr. Rogers had to be carried to a hospital.

The party continued with the introduction of Dr. Mills and his graceful dive into the pool. The rest of the day was spent in dancing, card playing and a delicious repast served by the hostess. It is reported that Dr. Mills

POMPTON LAKES, N. J.

When Joe Louis climbs into the ring at the Yankee Stadium Monday night to battle Tommy Farr, British champion, he will earn the distinction of being the youngest of all recognized heavy weight title holders to engage in a bout in defense of the honor.

One big reason for this, of course, is that Joe was younger than any of his predecessors back to the time of John L. Sullivan, and including the great John L. when he won the title. But if the new champion had followed the custom so prevalent in recent years, of taking a long rest before risking his crown, even that early winning would not mean so much. Joe is setting a new style by engaging in a title bout less than three months after having gained the top honors.

Louis Favored

Louis was a 10-1 choice in the betting odds late today and very little money had been placed on the Welshman. Many fans are of the opinion that Farr is no match for the bomber and that the bout won't last long. However, Tom's style is considered so awkward that it is clever, and there's no telling what may happen.

Something more than physical fitness will be operating in Joe Louis' behalf Monday at the Yankee Stadium when he steps into the ring as world champion attempting the first defense of his title. The physical side of the picture already has been attested by the official physicians of the New York State Athletic Commission.

No Complaints

The worries, the process servers and the threatened lawsuits which have plagued some of the heavyweight champions of the past, and usually during their training campaigns, have been entirely missing here as Louis went through his daily paces. Louis has mixed better in this camp than in his previous training work. He has enjoyed the crowds and he was happy in his work. Strains of gay music rang out frequently from the champion's electric phonograph during the lulls in his training activities.

Blind Man Sees For First Time

Anniston, Ala.—(ANP)—A stream of curious people, both white and colored, has flocked to the little ramshackle edifice of the Church of God in Christ here, since Monday to view the site of "a modern miracle," through which, by the medium of prayer, blind Major Barron, sightless since birth was made to see.

H. C. Kidd, a member, the "Major" went to the church, to do as he described it, "some heavy praying." Suddenly, those in the church all agreed, the miracle happened. Declares Major Barron: "We had an inspiration, and suddenly the Lord lifted the black from my eyes. All of a sudden I could see and I jumped up in the air and praised the Lord."

Barron is well known in West Tnison where for years he has made a bare existence by begging. Late Monday, with Rev. S. D. Brown, pastor of the church and stopped to visit Dr. Rogers in W. Va. on his return to Durham and found him in his usual jovial mood. His condition improving.

Barron, according to witnesses, ran from the church, shouting "Hallelujah! Praise God, I can see." He later ran into a policeman who was about to arrest him as drunk but when he heard his remarkable story the officer permitted him to continue his wild celebration. Barron a 37 years old.
