most of the best in the conference, and there will be no stopping them next fall after they report again to the supernatural and produce some guards and fullbacks to work with the almost-complete team of veterans that will return.

CIAA MEET COMES TO NORTH CAROLINA

The best that the CIAA affords in track and field stars T. E. Verdell will bring from including the champs which coach Virginia State and the championship relay team from Hampton, will gather at A and T College in Greensboro on Saturday, May 11, for the open championship meet. Although Durham's favorite college will not be represented, several Durham lovers of the sports will go over next Saturday "just to be around," provided that they survive all that promises to accompany the annual Omega formal at the Armory on the night before. The sportsmen will again return to the City of the Bull on Sunday for that thrilling and colorful encounter between the Toledo Crawfords and the Ethiopian Clowns. Far from being a minor attraction on this same program will be Jesse Owens who will go to the limit in proving to the fans that he is still the world's fastest human. A day later May 13, all Durham will go out to Durham Athletic park again to do a bit of Heroworshiping. The occasion will be the appearance of Durham's own Bud Barbee and Roy Debnam in the regular lineup of the New York Black Yankees. Bud has been limbering up out at Hot Springs and is counted on to do most of the Yanks' hurling this season. Debnam is relying on his unmatched ability at wielding the willow stick to see him through, and he's good as the next one when it comes to good clean hits. We'll be there rooting for these former Black Sox players.

LETTERMEN OUT

Several lettermen of last season were among the veteran players to return since only one member of the regular team will be lost through graduation. At tackle Pitts, Anders, Russel, and Garrett have reported; Peerman, Moore, Alston, and Fines are making bids for end positions; Washington and Preston are the only guards out; G. Mack and Duke will hold down center, Hall, Warmick and Greene are at right halfback; D. Mack, Duckwilder, and Lightner at left halfback; Johnson and Williams at Quarterback, with Brown the lone fullback. Coach Burghardt is trying to discover among the new material suitable players to alleviate the weaknesses at guard and fullback.

Next fall the Eagles will go on the gridiron with their same style of offensive play, the single wingback from punt formation. However, the defense will be greatly broadened. Coach Burghardt will call the Eagles in from their summer vacations for fall practice on or before Sept. 14th and their first game has been scheduled for October 5 when Livingstone of Salisbury will be here.

EIGHT GAMES ON SCHEDULE

All except three of the 1940 games for the North Carolina College Eagles will be played in Durham at O'Kelly field. After opening with Livingstone on Oct. 5th they will entrain for an encounter with the Bluefield Teacher in Bluefield October 12. They return home to meet St. Paul

Hillside Seniors Practice With Eagle Gridders

BY WILLIAM A. TUCK (SPORTS EDITOR)

DURHAM — After being delayed by a late basketball season and a great deal of unfavorable weather, the Eagles of North Carolina College began spring football drills Monday, April 29. A record number of thirty-seven men answered the call of Coach W. F. Burghardt and he has stated that he has already spotted new material that may be used to advantage in the fall. This number includes a few youngsters from the freshman class, some of whom show a little promise while others seem to be "out for the fun of it."

The spring drills which will continue for two weeks through May 11, will consist of the timing of the Eagles' offensive plays, the development of a stronger passing attack as well as a pass defense, and the stressing of offensive and defensive stance among the linemen. No heavy equipment will be used.

HILLSIDE SENIORS DRILL WITH EAGLES

Including among the 37 men who reported for spring practice at the college were several stars of the 1939 edition of the Hillside Hornets. The fellows who chose to workout with the Eagles are seniors at the high school who are planning to further their education and athletic careers at North Carolina College in September. Some of these are: Lawrence Perry, working at tackle; Joe Graves, tackle; Morrissey in the backfield, and Durrah, who will fill a post at either guard or center. Other

Hillside Takes Several First Places At Festival

RECORD NUMBER ATTENDS N. C. HIGH SCHOOL MUSIC FESTIVAL

GREENSBORO, (Special) — A and T College of Greensboro played host to the annual North Carolina State High School music festival all day Friday, April 26. Twenty-seven schools were represented as winners of the various districts throughout the state and the festival was a gala occasion that displayed the best high school musical talent in the state both vocal and instrumental. Five high school bands took part in the parade and band contest held Friday afternoon.

According to Miss T. H. Claggett, state director, the great improvements in singing and the appreciation of singing were observed and commended by the judges. It is felt that such growth could have come about only through participation in the various district contests and through the annual state festivals.

BANDS TAKE PART

This year is the first time that the high school bands of the state have participated in the annual music festival. Five cities were represented and although some of the bands have been formed for only one year, they made splendid showings that provoked favorable comments from the judges and music lovers in general. Wilmington, Raleigh, Durham, Laurinburg, and Greensboro were the cities represented by bands.

It was at 2:30 on Friday afternoon all the bands took part in a colorful parade in which the A and T College concert band was guest Drum Majors Weaver and Graham of Durham actually "stole the show" with their handling of the baton. The contest followed the parade at 5:30. No prizes were given but the judges mailed their criticisms to the respective directors.

Schools from the following towns were represented with choral groups: Aboxis, Albermarle, Belmont, Catawba, Charlotte, (West Charlotte High and Second Ward) Chapel, Durham, East Spencer, Gastonia, Graham, Greensboro, Henderson, Hickory. Please turn to Page Eight

FOOTLIGHT FLICKERS

BACKSTAGE CHATTER AND THING!!

Would it be in order to throw a swell shindig for Eddie (Rochester) Anderson without inviting that sevelte wife?...asked a stage struck lil chorine who has invaded the privacy of more happy married lives than Adolf Hitler has the borders of small neutral countries.

Her answering echo (in the person of a chorus member) yelled back..."Now you know Mr. Marshall (Apollo Theatre) would hear about it before the first drink was served and you be... right back out on Seventh Avenue, standing in the relief line where we snatched you from."

"Oh, what the heck just forget I ever mentioned the subject" said the baby-voiced other individual "skip it sister, ship it!" Later, and we mean only a minute or two later the young lady ran smack into Mr. Anderson, on a leisurely walk from his quarters in Theresa Hotel, long cigar and all. We wonder what her thoughts were as they passed each other like vessels in ship lanes on a dark and foggy night?

Strolling from Dickie Wells around 4 a. m. Sunday morning, was the character known to Harlem as "Beachcomber" with a pulchritty tipsy, dizzy blonde gal, and her two "Aryah" companions. Obviously, they had all fooled around too long with the gin bottle for their steps ran in figures like "S" and "Z" of the well known alphabet. The lights were against them, but the brave, guardianlike bronzed brother insisted on risking his life (for their amusement) by jumping in front of speeding cars not 50 feet away from him and directing their course in traffic cop fashion. Finally the blonde sobered up enough to shrilly shout: "Oh, don't make such a damn fool out of yourself, that's all lanes on a dark and foggy night? you've been doing all night long!"
