WHERE IS GREAT BRITAIN'S ARMY?

These are dark days for the British lion. The fear that once acanied his roar is gone, and the world stands aghast as the once mighty beast that has dominated Europe for approximately a thousands years fights fiercely for his very existence.

So they say the sun never sets on the British empire. Unless the tide of battle shifts and shifts very soon the sun will never rise on the British empire. The march of the mighty German army seress France and the pounding of that same army at the gates of England raises a serious question before the entire civilized world. Where is Great Britain's army?

Australia, Brypt, India and South Africa, part of the colonial pomessions of the British empire with their teeming millions are imost helpless in this dark hour of England's existence to go to the aid of the mother country.

England thought it was smirt to keep her colonials from arming. gland thought it wise not to train them in the art of modern warfare. England would mather cheat, exploit, and overtax her colenials than to permit them to share in the glory of freedom. lence instead of love and respect for the mother country there is heared and diarespect. Instead of calling on her colonials for more manpewer, England is afraid as well as concious of the fact that test of her colonials are untrained for modern warfare. Where is Great Britain's army? Great Britain has no army worthy of the name.

The United States ought to learn a lesson from her sister counmy before it is too late. The practice of barring Negroes from estain branches of the national defense is sacrificing too much to the gods of prejudice in these turbulent times.

need not bury our heads in the sand like an ostrich and try to make believe that the war now going on in Europe cannot hoppen here. Whether we like to admit it or not, each day, each ar draws us closer and closer toward America's entrance into the European conflict.

Those into whose hands the destiny of this makion has been placed ought not expect the Negro to play his part in the next war without being properly trained in all branches of the nation's defonce. They ought not expect the Negro to be satisfied with making up the labor battalions as they did, for the most part, in the other world war.

With this fact set forth and taken to heart, it now becomes imperatively necessary for the Administration to take note of the discriminatory attitade of the Generals and the Admirals who formulate the defense plans of the Government toward that always loyal group of our American citizenship, the Negro group.

While calling for united patriotism, the New Deal is breaking down the morale of the Negro group, and discouraging their patroitism by announcing that present plans do not contempl-

This is not the time for Cole red voters in the Northern states to beg for recognition, and for the opportunity to serve their country. They have political powers and they should use that political power by informing their representatives in Congress the Senate and the House of Representatives, of how indignantly they feel, and they should insist that they are willing no longer to remain victims of sh out moded social caste system which has no business in Army Denfense Plans.

With the control of the Government wholly within the hands of the New Deal Democratic Party, with sh approach ing election near at hand, in which New Dealers will soon be begging for Negro votes, it is not politics, it is common sense to demand of the Democratic Party, with all this power within its control that it overrule the Army Chiefs who are serving traditional prejudices rather than looking after the proper defense of our country.

The remedy remains within power of the Colored people by refusing support of of party which wishes to Federalise its contempt and its prejudices against them.

THE FIFTH COLUMN

During the dark and gloomy days of the old World War after America had entered on the side of the allies, Negro soldiers were given the tasks of guarding the White House and other important posts throughout the nation. The name "Fifth Column" had not come fato use, but the danger of spice was just as prevalent in the confines of the United States as it is today.

The speech delivered by President Roosevelt last afonday even ing serves notice on all American citizens that the United States Il again soon take up arms against the tyranny of Germany and Italy. This means that again Negro soldiers will be about the only soldiers that the government can be absolutely assured of being ene-hundred per cent Americans, and will be called upon to stand chard over secred spots in America to assure their sufety from Tifth Column" stiacks.

There is something ironical about this trusting of Negro soldiers in the times of stress in the United States. It does appear hat if black men in uniforms are the only ones that the government can be absolutely sure of during periods of war that these me men could be trusted as soldiers during times of peace.

"Fifth Column" in America may or may not exist. If it ere is little chance that Negroes have any part in it. The chances the it is composed, for the most part, of foreign born white Ameriane who have been accorded rights and privileges in this country d native born and loyal American Negroes.
