

West Durham Sunday School is Dedicated

DR. SHEPARD ATTACKS THE GRUMBLERS

BY WILLIAM A. TUCK
DURHAM — In the address that was the main feature of the dedication of the West Durham Baptist Church's new modern

Sunday School building last Sunday afternoon at three p. m., Dr. James E. Shepard, President of the North Carolina College gave a definite outline of the things necessary to the success of a modern church and was impressively forceful in his disgust for grumble," he said, "and won't grumble," he said, "and grumblers won't work."
Dr. Shepard's subject was "The Place of the Sunday School

PROUD OF HER FIRST MATTRESS is this Negro woman of Bertie County who has just helped to make a cotton mattress under the new program of surplus cotton disposal. The State College Extension Service is cooperating with other agencies to direct the making of cotton mattresses for low income farm families. About seven mattresses a day are being made by Negro families under the direction of Mrs. Lillian H. Woodhouse, Negro home agent in Bertie.

in the Social World" and emphasized the part that the church can play as a civic, educational, social and loving organization. Cooperation between the pastors and Sunday school members was urged.

Music for his dedicatory service was rendered by the male chorus of the Mount Gilead Baptist Church with Mrs. Geneva Glover at the piano. To add to the music of the day a solo was sung by Mrs. Lucilla Fuller.

The program was opened with the reading of rituals by Rev. T. C. Graham with the response from the audience.

The first address of the afternoon came from Dr. J. M. Hubbard, Superintendent of the White Rock Baptist Church Sunday school, who talked on "Dreamers and Doers." He spoke vividly on the achievement in church development for Negroes in Durham through the accomplishments of Rev. Graham in realizing the finely appointed Sunday school building. He said in part: "The wide awake church could no longer carry out its many offices in the main church auditorium. In order to be successful as leaders, dreamers must be doers as well. They should be able to make their dreams come true instead of satisfying themselves with pictures, noble ideas that exist in the mind only.

He further stated that church leadership be seriously considered in the Sunday School in the program of expansion. He pointed to the Sunday school as the bridge over the chasm of life to insure safe traveling for youth.

E. R. Merrick, vice-president, treasurer of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, talked about "The Church and Business," and he was followed by Principal N. A. Cheek of the W. G. Pearson school who discussed the relation of the public school teacher to the Sunday school. He pointed out interestingly that since the teacher knows more about the child than the average person, she should naturally be an important part of any active Sunday school.

As president of the ministerial Alliance, Rev. S. P. Perry pointed to the Sunday school as a plant bed for the child as a beginning of the future church.

After the main address and the introduction of the Sunday school superintendents of the city, the visitors who had attended the services were guided through all parts of the new building. They saw that it consists of seven classrooms on the main floor, two down stairs, an auditorium, a kitchen, a pantry, two bath rooms and a cloak room. Everyone in the city is invited to avail himself of the opportunity to visit the building, the only one of its kind in the city.
