Hampton Institute Reorganizes Staff, Adds Nationally Known Educators

Hampton, Va. — Sweeping revisions in the curricula and staff and introduction of a large scale personnel and guidance system at Hampton Institute, the 73 year old institution of higher learning for Negroes at Hampton Virginia, have been announced by the college's Executive Council.

The Council, which is composed of President Malcolm McLean, Vice President Robert Ogden Purjes, Dean of Instruction R. O'Hara Lanier, and Dean of Women Flenmie P. Kittrell, has closed its first year of intensive research and study with the faculty, student body, and alumni of the school.

This daily study and discussions with the nation's outstanding educational consultants, have several objectives increasingly clear to the Council, announced Dr. MacLean.

The first major steps in the revision of curriculum introduced a new Division of General Studies. This will take its place in the present organizational setup of Agriculture, Business, Education, Home Economics, Summer and Extension Study, and Trades and Industries.

The first of the additions to the Hampton Institute biracial teaching and administrative staff were announced by the Council, which indicated that further appointments would follow.

C. L. Reynolds, of Dillard University, New Orleans, has been appointed purchasing agent and assistant to the Treasurer. Mr. Reynolds, who holds an M. A. from Atlanta University, is now assistant to the business manager at Dillard.

Harold H. Williams, a Hampton graduate now working for his doctorate at Cornell, will teach floriculture and head of the Department of Grounds.

Dr. B. Alfred Turner, former graduate assistant to Doctor F. Theodore Struck, one of America's foremost authorities in industrial education at Pennsylvania State College, was named curriculum consultant in the Division of Trades and Industries.

Dr. Margaret Altmann, who has received Ph.Ds both in Germany and at Cornell and is nationally known for her work in animal husbandry, embryology, endocrinology, and rural sociology physicist and agricultural engineer, was appointed assistant professor physics.

Theodore Mills, of the University of Minnesota, who has done nine years of research and experimental work in motion pictures and electricity, goes to the Department of Electricity in the Division of Trades and Industries.

Robert J. Sailstad, coordinator of speech at the University of Minnesota, was named director of the new communications center at Hampton and will head the first college unit in the country to coordinate all work done in reading, writing and speech.

A. Nelson Dingle, of Iowa State University, well known of the St. Paul Institute of Musical Art and before the World War an internationally known director of great orchestras and grand opera, will teach instrumental music and direct the Hampton Institute band.

Craig Henry, a graduate of Hampton Institute's Division of Agriculture was named foreman of the new Institute experiment farm at Aberdeen Garden, Va.

Cecil B. Patterson, a graduate of the Hampton Trade School Class of 1938, has been appointed an assistant in the Hampton Institute laundry.

Promotions and new assignments of present faculty members were also announced.

Dark Laughter BY OL HARRINGTON

F. Irene Sanders, teacher of music, was appointed chairman of the Department of Music. Camillo A. Chazeaud, acting chaplain, was appointed to the chaplaincy.

Morle S. Klinek, chairman of the planning commission for the Division of Agriculture, was elected director by the students and faculty of the Division. John A. Vohringer was appointed manager of all Hampton Institute farms.

Noble E. Payton was shifted from the Physics to the Chemistry Department. Asa C. Sims was transferred from the Division of Agriculture to the Extension Department.

Roscoe E. Lewis, who was just awarded a Rosenwald fellowship for a year's study and preparation of a new book on ex-slaves, was given a sabbatical leave of absence for one year.

Eva C. Mitchell, who has been on sabbatical leave the past year was appointed to head the work in elementary education in the Division of Education.

Elizabeth W. Chandler will head the work in secondary education in the absence of Bernice A. O'Briant, who is given sabbatical leave of absence for one and one-half years to do educational research.

F. Raymond Jenkins went on leave of absence, as did Donald F. Fenn, who was transferred from the directorship of the Division of Agriculture to the Unit of Social Studies.
