

Coroners Jury--

(Continued from Page One) Patrolman Teague shot him once through the hip. I heard him cry out. I opened the front door. They dragged him on the front porch and began beating him on the head with their pistols. I asked why they were beating him. One of the officers replied "He broke in a white man's house." I protested against their brutal whipping my husband whom they already shot. The officer spoke harshly to me: "You get away, you have nothing to do with this."

The officers accosted Wilson after he attempted to break in to G. S. Steppes house on Chestnut Street. He was under the influence of liquor and resisted arrest, it was testified. In a chase through yards in the Negro section, the Negro kicked Patrolman Teague while going over a wire fence in the dark. The officer fired downward. He did not know whether the bullet struck the man, who ran, he said. With a bullet in his abdomen, Wilson fought the officers for 20 minutes. They used their guns to club him with little effect. They finally got the handcuffs on him.

Patrolman Teague went about two blocks to get the highway car and left Patrolman Young with the weakened prisoner. A crowd of Negroes--men and women--assembled and threatened the officer, he stated. "You people get across the street and line up and keep quiet or I'll drop you one by one," Patrolman Young commanded. The crowd hesitated and then hustled to obey when a Negro woman said, "We better do what he says--he killed my husband."

Patrolman Teague returned and he and Young took the Negro to a hospital. He died in a few minutes. "It took 50 blows with our pistol butts to subdue Wilson. We didn't want to kill him," the officers testified.

Nannie A. Wilson Here is the daily newspaper story Greenville, June 27.--Woodrow Wilson, Negro, recently discharged from the Army, was fatally wounded by State highway patrolmen about midnight Saturday when he resisted arrest for alleged attempted burglary. A coroner's jury exonerated Patrolmen C. L. Teague and R. W. Young and commended them for fearless performance of their duty.

They did not know Teague's bullet struck the man until they arrived at the hospital. Teague lost his badge and eyeglasses during the 30-minute struggle. A jury impanelled by Coroner Griffin H. Rouse of Pitt County said they believed Wilson died from the blows on his head and not the bullet wound.

(Continued from Page One) Judge Delany's speech was one of the most inspiring and forceful ever delivered in Durham and many times during its deliverance he was interrupted by loud and long applause from the several hundred Negroes attending the program. "I am speaking to you not as a tax commissioner, not as a Judge of the Domestic Relations Court, Not as a member of the Board of Directors of the USO, not as a Negro from the North or from the South, but as a human being;" Thus spoke Judge Hubert T. Delany as he delivered the dedicatory address. The speaker gave commendation to those responsible for the erection of such a fine and beautiful structure, which is to become a home for service men regardless of color and to USO director Theodore Smith, his staff and volunteer workers for the fine work they have done in the past and for what they will do in the future to keep up the morale of the soldier's. For said he, "knowing Mr. Smith as I do I am sure his good work will continue. Speaking of the building Judge Delany said that "All its beauty would be meaningless and without real democracy if it would not be open to all soldiers, Negro and white alike. Judge Delany spoke at length have more respect for Negro leaders in the army than they have been accustomed to have for parents and teachers at home as any other course will ultimately lead to ruin for them and our race and we can no longer

To Hasten Victory No American wants this war to go one minute beyond the time we can bring it to a victorious end. To hasten that victory--to save possibly the lives of millions of our boys on our far flung fronts--it is imperative that every American do his part in the Second War Loan. There is an investment to fit every purse. The most you can do is little enough compared with the sacrifice offered by our boys in service. They give their lives --you lend your money.

They will lead our boys into battle where they will all make the acquaintance of vermin, hunger, thirst, death, and distraction and those who survive will, because of their experience, be better fitted to lead our race in the hardships which will inevitably follow the war. Who can lead more effectively than the man who has been trained and accustomed to lead? Who can endure unbearable hardships and teach others to do it any better than the man who has had the experience? And lastly, who can think and act faster than the man who has had to think and act fast in order that he and his comrades might survive? We will not find such qualities in our self appointed, self-loving present day leaders and if we would survive this ordeal we must prepare to survive it. We must learn to recognize our able, unselfish leaders and on the application of the golden rule to our everyday life. When he said that democracy was based on the principles of the golden rule, and until men are willing to "Do unto thers as they would that men should do unto them," there would be no democracy a loud applause arose from his listeners. He continued by telling of the fight being waged by Negroes to help win the war. He also told of the jim crow practices of concerns producing war materials, and of how the colored soldier must carry a double load by being called upon to give his life for his country and for democracy by fighting a foreign enemy, while being denied this same democracy at home, and, said he, there are many in this country today who would rather yield to Hitler than to give the Negro equality. The present world conflict could be shortened by years, but we can not hope to defeat Hitler abroad until we have defeated him at home. In closing his discourse, Judge Delany said that "All human beings want is justice and equality and a true practice of the Golden Rule." Which is so little that I can't see why any government, whether it be local, state, or national could not give it.
