

Eagles—

(Continued from Page Four) took this 6-4 advantage, and for the remainder of the half, the tilt was a spectators' game. West Virginia's star football player, Clarence (B. U. M. P. S.) Clark, handled the strategy of the West Virginians, an offensive centered mainly on working the casaba in to Wilson or Lloyd or, when the Eagles tightened their defense, moving the ball to where any one of an accomplished squad of point-makers could take unhurried shots at the nets.

Harold Hunter

Captain Harold Hunter, as always, was the "sixth" man for the Eagles. Twice he made accurate passes to Warlick, as the big center moved under the basket for successful shots; and twice in the second period of the first frame, he bounce-passed to Weaver, who raced through the Mountaineer's defense for lay-ups.

From 11-11, the score moved to 13-11, West Virginia; 13-all; 15-13, West Virginia; 15-all; 17-15, West Virginia and then to 19-15, West Virginia, when the 'Jackets' Sausbury pilfered a pass and dribbled in for a snowbird.

Shots Fall Off

After the throw-in, the Eagles worked the ball over in the corner to Warlick, who tried a one-hander. The ball hit inside the basket and jumped out. A rebound by Taylor was wide to the left, and a second shot by Young spun crazily on edge of the rim and fell into the hands of Lloyd. Lloyd's pass was intended for Gilliam, who was clear under the West Virginia goal, but Hunter, as he was to do on many other occasions, swiped the pass and shot the ball to Weaver, who blazed into the foul circle from the left side, made the erip, and fell after the shot.

The CIAA champions got back

Halftime 37-36

West Virginia could move no further away from the Eagles than one point, however, as Bill Young chunked in a net-whipper from near mid-court to start and maintain the earlier basket-for-basket pace until the intermission, when the '49 Tournament champs were still hanging on to a precious one-point, 37-36 advantage.

In the second half, the squads continued to exchange goals, with both defenses relaxing slightly and the contest becoming faster. The Eagles managed to stay right behind the West Virginians, but couldn't seem to move ahead until Weaver dropped in a one-hander from behind the foul circle to give his mates a brief 51-50 advantage. The Yellow Jackets' Wilson, with his hook-shot working like five hundred drilled ten points through the bucket in the first ten minutes of the period; and the big scoreboard flashed only three minutes playing time remaining when West Virginia moved ahead 63-63.

Tied Score

A pass from Hunter to Weaver, as the speedy little forward broke under the basket from the left, put the Eagles in front 68-67, but Enty dropped in a charity toss to knot the count. Then Taylor eluded Enty to lay up a erip, before Clarence Clark, whose new role in competition was that of shot-maker, sank a long shot to knot the count at 70-70.

After the throw-in, the Eagles worked the ball down the court slowly, moved it behind the foul circle, and passed it in to Taylor, who fainted beautifully and tossed in another erip.

Insurance Points

West Virginia's move down the court was interrupted by Hunter, who intercepted another 'Jacket' pass and began a freeze with less than a minute left in the game. Twice during the timeless minutes, Eagle erips were fouled by the anxious West Virginians, and twice Warlick and Hunter added the insurance points.

Twice also, was the ball, in turnabout fashion, taken from Hunter during the final 35 seconds, but on one occasion, the resulting West Virginia shot was inaccurate, and Bill Young intercepted the ball the other time.

At the game's end, Harold Hunter, however, who was named the Tournament's "Most Valuable Player," had the ball.

The new building, constructed of concrete, hollow tile and brick, is two stories high and contains many advantages of modern construction. The first floor contains a reception room, individual offices for the dean, his secretary and teaching members of the faculty, and five classrooms. As many as thirty students may be accommodated in each classroom. The building is singularly equipped with elevators. A library room and stacks sufficient for a library of 40,000 volumes have been provided on the second floor together with offices and a work-room for the law librarian. Reading rooms are provided for the students. The building has a moot court room completely equipped.
