Raleigh — The Summer Session Commencement for the 85th academic year was held at Shaw University Thursday morning...

Dean W. R. Strasser, dean of the law school at Shaw University, speaking at the commencement...

Dr. Turner spoke on "The Task of the Educated Person." He told the graduating class that "In your education and its proper use, you carry the key to the world's salvation..."

"The world today," he said "is divided into two hostile camps — one is that of the democracies, the other totalitarian countries which pretend to offer economic security under a system of rigid personal control..."

As Negroes," he said, "we have a special stake in curing the diseases of our democracy, as we suffer most from its imperfections. We are, therefore, thankful for the blessings of democracy an d rely upon its principles to save the world, in spite of its imperfections..."

NCC, UNC Students In Health Meet

Fifty white and Negro students from the University of North Carolina at Chapel and North Carolina College here attended the third annual Working Conference for Health Educators here last Monday through Friday.

John E. Baker, health education consultant for the South Carolina Board of Health, explained and demonstrated various methods of interpreting the public health educator's duties to lay and professional groups Monday during the opening session.

Participants during the remainder of the week included Prof. Ernest Hooper of Loyola College, Memphis, Tenn.; Dean A. L. Turner of the N. C. College Law School; and Dr. Gordon W. Lovejoy, consultant, in intergroup relations for the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Following Monday's initial session on "Finding Ourselves in Health Education," the following days were devoted to discussions of human relations, medical care programs, and a final session, "Finding Ourselves as A Profession..."

Health educators devoting themselves to consideration of medical care included Emma Carr Bivins, Charlotte; Rickman, and Dr. Leroy R. Swift of North Carolina College's Student staff. Group leaders were Keith McDonald, Marion Wood, and Maxine Halth.

Forest Fire Conditions Will Get Critical

Washington, D. C. — With the fire threat on national forests already explosive in California, the Forest Service in the U. S. Department of Agriculture expects critical burning conditions to develop in the Pacific Northwest and the upper Rocky Mountain region during the next two or three weeks.

Carl A. Gustafson, chief of the Forest Service's Division of Fire Control, stated that the forest fire hazard in most Western states will rise steadily during August unless rainfall increases. He has just returned from the West, where he surveyed fire conditions and fire control activities.

During July, a total of 95,000 acres of forest land was burned in southern California. Fifty-five thousand acres were on the Angeles, San Bernardino and Los Padres national forests, and the remaining 40,000 acres were on state and private land. From the standpoint of forest fire damage in California, this was the worst July in 15 to 20 years.
