Wheeler Will Review Book At Library Monday

The Stanford L. Warren Library will present the third in its current series of book review forums, Monday evening, April 21, at eight o'clock in the auditorium of the library.

"Civil Rights in the United States" by Allison Reppy will be reviewed by J. H. Wheeler, vice-president and cashier of Mechanics and Farmers Bank. Mr. Reppy's book is an analysis of Supreme Court decisions in the area of civil rights during the past three years. Wheeler will also give some of the story of the Court's interpretation and application of the due process clauses of the national constitution during a critical period in the history of Constitutional and democratic governments as interpreted in "Due Process of Law" by Virginia Wood. The book review forum is one of the library's established activities for adults of the Durham community. Each review is well planned, different, and finished product about books and current issues in our time. The public is cordially invited to attend the review Monday evening, April 21 at eight o'clock.
