CIO'S Committee To Abolish Discrimination Praised The Platform Of Democratic Party

WASHINGTON
CIO's Committee to Abolish Discrimination last week praised the Platform of the Democratic Party, with special reference to its Civil Rights section, and at the same time strongly praised the Democratic Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates.

In a statement which analyzes the platforms of both parties and considers the qualifications of Governor Stevenson and Senator Sparkman, the committee recommended "to all Americans of goodwill the election of these two candidates."

The full text of the resolution follows:

Quote resolution on Democratic Platform and candidates. National CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination, special meeting, Mayflower Hotel, Aug. 15, 1952.

Ten years ago this month the Congress of Industrial Organizations, recognizing the tremendous improvements that could be effected in our society by extension of full civil rights to all of the American people, established the National CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination. This Committee and its members, who are drawn entirely from the ranks of labor and backed by National CIO, played a large part in establishing and formulating the recommendations of the President's Committee on Civil Rights set up by President Truman in 1947. The report of the President's Committee has been extensively implemented in the ranks of CIO.

On November 4, 1952 citizens of the United States will select a president and vice-president and a Congress to administer the affairs of our nation for the ensuing four years.

When political parties present themselves for the consideration of the voters they are required to proclaim their policies in formal terms and then nominate the candidate whose obligation it becomes to put those policies into effect. The platform and candidate cannot be separated. They are one entity.

Both national parties have now gone through these processes which, backed by the custom and tradition of the American people, give them the dignity of law.

In drafting its platform on Civil Rights and in selecting its candidates the Democratic Party, in comparison with the Republican Party, gave by far the closer attention to the hopes and aspirations of untold millions of American citizens who presented their views to both parties through their duly accredited free representative.

In the field of Civil Rights the Democratic Party pledged itself to the theory that more is required than "cooperative efforts of individual citizens and action by state and local governments." It made the forthright statement that the Federal Government must act, must live up to the ideals of the declaration of independence and must exercise the powers vested in it by the constitution.

The Democratic Party further pledged itself to complete the elimination of discrimination in the Armed Forces and the Civil Service. It pledged punitive action in defense of Civil Rights by the U. S. Department of Justice. It met specific issues squarely in the following language.

"At the same time we favor Federal legislation effectively to secure these rights to everyone:

1. The right to equal opportunity for employment;
2. The right to security of persons;
3. The right to full and equal participation in the nation's political life free from arbitrary restraints."

Finally, the Democratic Party pledged itself to institute Congressional procedures that will prevent filibuster and make possible legislative decisions by majority vote.

These statements are clear and impossible of misinterpretation. In sharp contrast the Republican Party confined itself to a reaffirmation of State's Rights which have too often in the past operated to deny human rights to the individual citizen.

To carry out its pledges on Civil Rights and other pledges made in the platform, the Democratic Party gave prolonged consideration to the qualifications of the potential and available candidates. The candidates were weighed in the terms already set forth by the Democratic platform.

The Convention nominated Adlai E. Stevenson, Governor of Illinois, for President and U. S. Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama for Vice-President.

Both of these candidates have stated publicly that they will support the Democratic Platform and will make their campaigns upon the principles and policies which it proclaims.

Adlai E. Stevenson has a life long record as a liberal as governor of Illinois he has invoked even the military power of his state, notably in the Cicero affair, to enforce American legal and moral principles in defense of human rights. He has outlawed segregation in the public schools of Illinois. His thinking is embodied in the Democratic Platform.

John J. Sparkman has on a number of occasions challenged the proclaimed white supremacy claims of the Dixiecrats. As a delegate to the Convention from Alabama and as a leader in the Democratic Party, he assisted in the drafting of the Democratic platform and it bore his endorsement when it was presented to the Convention.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations, through its Executive Board and its National Political Action Committee, has endorsed the Candidacies of Adlai E. Stevenson and John J. Sparkman and has recommended to the American people their election in November as President and Vice-President of the United States of America.

MORGAN STATE COLLEGE BEARS FACE TOUGH GRIDIRON BATTLE

BALTIMORE
Have the Morgan State College Bears bitten off more than they can chew on the gridiron this fall?

That is a question that is being heard here frequently as the time draws near for the 1952 football campaign to get under way.

With the loss of more than a dozen of last year's letter men, the doubtful return of some 27 members of the 1951 squad and the possibility that no more than 15 newcomers will be available when practice gets under way on September 1, the question as to whether the Bears will be able to hurdle their nine game schedule successfully looms larger than ever.

First of all, Morgan will establish a precedent by playing its opening game on September 27, two days before the fall term begins, and, ironically, with Central State College at Wilberforce, Ohio.

Last year, the Ohioans soundly trounced the Bears, 14-7 right here at home and from pre-season reports, they will be as strong if not stronger than last season.

Morgan must also meet the A. and T. College Aggies, CIAA champions last year, at Greensboro, N. C. Even at top strength, the Bears have found the Aggies one of their toughest foes. Last year the Aggies slaughtered Morgan here, 31-6.

West Virginia State, which humbled Morgan in the National Classic at Washington last year, 20-13, must be met at Charleston, W. Va. and Virginia State, which defeated Morgan, 14-8, must be met at Petersburg on Thanksgiving Day.

Hampton Institute, which shaded Morgan, 7-6 last year, is reported to be stronger than before and the Lincoln University Lions, who were nosed out by a 7-2 score, are also known to have gained strength.

The return to the Morgan schedule of the Virginia Union University Panthers, after a lay-off of several seasons, certainly doesn't do anything to lighten the gridiron burden of the Bears.

Other opponents on the schedule are Delaware State College and Howard University, either of which can be depended upon to field a representative aggregation. Last year Morgan won only three of eight games. Can the Bears expect to do as well this year with an even tougher schedule?

Coach Edward P. Hurt and his assistants would certainly like to have the answer to that one.

Therefore be it resolved: That the National CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination wholeheartedly concurs in the endorsement of Adlai E. Stevenson and John J. Sparkman by the Congress of Industrial Organizations and expressly recommends to all Americans of goodwill the election of these two candidates as President and Vice-President at the election on November 4, 1952.

Track Shoes Given To Morgan State College

BALTIMORE
The Jersey and track shoes which he wore in winning the 400-meter title at the recent Olympic Games, will be given to Morgan State College for its trophy case, V. George Rhoden, June graduate, revealed in a letter this week.

Rhoden, who will enroll at New York University for graduate study in the fall, further revealed that he intends to visit his alma mater late in Sept., at which time the items will be formally presented to the college.

In all probability, a special student assembly will be called at which time Art Bragg, Morgan junior, who lost his bid for the Olympic 100-meter dash title because of a leg injury, will also be welcomed back to the campus.

Former NCC Students Now In Korea

SOMEWHERE IN KOREA—Edward E. Nixon of Long Island, New York, and Leonard Shadding of Goldsboro, both former students at the North Carolina College at Durham, are among the American GI's battling the Reds in the Korean war zone.

Nixon, whose home address is 157 South "S" Street, Oyster Bay, Long Island, has recently been promoted to corporal. He is now serving with the 619th Military Battalion.

Shadding, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Shadding, 727 Isler Street, Goldsboro, now is serving with the 45th Infantry Division.

Nixon's battalion is responsible for road patrols and the security against infiltrating guerrillas. Prior to entering the Army in February, 1951, Nixon attended NCC during 1949 and 1950.

Shadding was a star athlete on Coach Herman Riddick's 1951 football team. At the time he entered the Army, he was a junior at North Carolina College.

A recent Army release describes Shadding's activities as part of the 45th Division as an engineer specialist. The 45th was part of a contingent which captured "T-Bone Hill" in June in the see-saw battle for "Old Baldy," a strategic hill position near Chorwon on the western front.
