

The famous Hillside Band, under the direction of Philmore Hall, will be presented in concert in the school auditorium Monday night, December 15, at 8:00 P. M. The band has developed under Mr. Hall's direction to be the finest in the state.

All of Durham is proud of this accomplished organization. The Parent-Teacher's Association is sponsoring this concert for the purpose of purchasing a console organ for the school in an effort to round out the musical and cultural program of the school. All of the civic organizations and many individuals in the city have been requested to make a contribution toward this project. It is the belief of the members of the association that every citizen in Durham will be anxious to share in this effort. If you have been contacted more than once, please consider it a privilege, because a project of such magnitude indeed needs all that you can give through any source. On behalf of all of the students of Hillside High School and those yet to come, we offer many, many thanks for all that you will do. Please make your contributions to D. F. Reed, Service Printing Company or to L. B. Frasier, North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company.

AFRICAN TRIBESMEN EXPOSE INJUSTICES BEFORE THE UN

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. Tribesmen of the Wameru, a region of Tanganyika near Kilimanjaro, on the frontier of Africa, appealed to the United Nations General Assembly to direct the restoration of lands from which they charged 3,000 men, women and children had been evicted by the British authorities to make room for thirteen white settlers. The petition was heard by the Trusteeship Committee, with Kirilo Japhet, secretary of the Meru Citizens Union speaking to the sixty-nation group through Earle Seaton, counsel of the tribe and interpreter. "On November 17 last year, there came to Ngare-Nanyuki about 120 police," the committee was told. "There were many, and we could not count them. They were accompanied by seven European officers and 100 people of the Kikuyu tribe. They began to enter our houses, to remove food. Some things were left inside the houses. They went on like this for about three days. During this period one woman was giving birth to a child. The District Commissioner arrived and saw her about to give birth, but he was unable to give her the necessary opportunity to deliver. Her house was burned, her husband was arrested. The mother lived in the wild brush and, after four days, her child died." The recital of incidents reached its climax in this appeal: "We, therefore, beg you, honorable members of this committee to reaffirm clearly and firmly the basic principles and ideals of the trusteeship system. Crush the head of the serpent of racial segregation, or 'apartheid' which has dared to show itself. Save the peoples from the misery, frustration and bitterness which such policies have produced in Kenya and South Africa. Restore us to our lands." The Meru representative said the tribesmen were sadly disillusioned four months ago when the Trusteeship Council, rejecting their request for land restoration, recommended "generous" compensation, resettlement, "assistance" and other ineffectual measures.

Howard University Players To Present Robert Ardrey's 'Jeb' As Final Performance Of 1952

Washington, D. C. — Robert Ardrey's JEB, a play depicting the trials and tribulations of a returning Negro war veteran to his native state of Louisiana, will be presented by the Howard University Players December 10th through December 13th, Otto McClarrin, Director of Public Relations at Howard announced today. The production, which will be directed by James W. Butcher of the University's Department of Drama, will be staged at the Little Theatre in Spaulding Hall on the campus and curtain time has been set at 8:30 p. m. for the four evening performances.

JEB is the story of a much-decorated Negro G. I. who returns to his home in the South following World War II. After receiving a hero's welcome, he applies for a job above the level of a menial and this is where his troubles begin. The forces of prejudice set upon him and he is forced to leave home. Not to be defeated, Jeb vows that he will return from his exile.

Jeb opened on Broadway in February, 1946 with a cast that included Carolyn Hill Stewart, Ossie Davis, and Ruby Dee. Howard players Theodis Shine, Colleen Carmichael, Frances Thornton, Wallace Culver, Edmond Jenkins, and Roland Noel have been selected by Mr. Butcher to head the cast of 30 in the University's production.

Drama Professor Owen Dodson has designed the sets for the play's seven scenes and reservations are available at the Little Theatre ticket office in Spaulding Hall.
