NBC Selects Performers On Ability; Color of Skin, Race Not Important

Chicago — The National Broadcasting Company has "just one yardstick . . . the selection of performers on the basis of ability without regard to racial derivation," according to Edward D. Madden, Vice President for Public Relations of that network.

The NBC executive addressed a representative group of press and public leaders from the Midwest-Great Lakes area as a part of a roundtable discussion in the network's studios here. Madden's remarks, in the nature of a "report to the Negro community" on the development of NBC's concept of "integration without identification," centered around the network's use of top Negro performers on leading programs, both musical and dramatic.

In citing Negro actors, musicians and dancers who have appeared on NBC programs over the last two years, the broad analysis of the types of Negro acts presented. In the dance field, he casting executive pointed out that "the inclusion of such artists has helped enlarge our audience."

With the aid of specially prepared slides, Madden gave the audience a comprehensive analysis of leading male and female figures as well as mixed units. Instrumentalists, noted for their solo work in the jazz world, were shown along with well known orchestra leaders. Male and female vocalists, popular vocal groups and choirs were also brought to attention.

Included among these were: the dancing teams of the Three Rockets and the Clark Brothers; internationally famous Pearl Primus; Mary Hinkson, Philadelphia ballerina, who will again be included in the cast of Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on Christmas day; and the Katherine Dunham dancers.
