Negro Farmer Walks Proudly Over Farm

WARSAW
Sam Miller, farmer of near Warsaw, who was fumbling around as a plain dirt farmer on a hit and miss proposition only a year ago, now walks sur-footed about his 135 acres, talking about better dairy and hog production as well as improved cash crops.

Riddick E. Wilkins, farm agent for the Extension Service, says "Miller is not all talk either." He can truthfully boast of having one of the first herds of purebred, registered Duroc Jersey swine in that part of the state. Wilkins adds that it is not uncommon to see a small group of farmers viewing and admiring the large herd of swine at feeding time. "Miller is probably the only Negro farmer in all Duplin County to be able to sell purebred stock with all the necessary papers," Wilkins says. "He is an ardent follower of improved farming methods fostered by the Extension Service and other agricultural agencies."
