linians annually loose their lives in accidental drownings, it was revealed here today by the Accident Prevention Sec-tion of the North Carolina State Board of Health in asking all persons to exercise precautions while engaging in water sports

Dr. Charles M. Cameron, Jr. chief of the Accident Preven-tion Section, pointed out that while a sizeable number of drownings occur in every season of the year, the toll is heaviest in the summer when outdoo recreational activities are a their peak

Almost half of all accide tal drownings occur in June and July," Dr. Cameron said. "Mos victums of drowning are males with the highest death rates from this cause being recorded for boys from 15-19 years of

Some insight into the cirdrownings occur at various age Health which investigates many of the accidental deaths reported by the local health departments and physicians, it was pointed out.

"Most of the drownings at ages from one to nine years anpear to result from youngsters falling into or wading in rivers New Personnel creeks, and other bodies of water," Dr. Cameron said "Among the younger of these Added To NCC children, there is evidence that a considerable proportion of the deaths took place around the home--some of them in ornamental garden pools, cess-pools, septic tanks, wells, cis-terns and ponds."

"Quite different is the situ-ation at the older ages," the state health official continued. "Swimming accounted for more than two-fifths of accidenta drownings among boys and young men and watercraft ac-cidents caused an additional one-sixth."

The Board of Health stated that the number of deaths from accidental drownings can be re-duced only when every persor is aware of the dangers associated with outdoor recreational activities.

Much credit should also go to the American Red Cross, the Boy and Girl Scouts, the Coast Guard, and the National Safety Council for their activities de signed to reduce the needless waste of lives from drowning.

THE SERPENT may be gone from

THE SERPENT may be gone from summer paradiases now that a new, medically-tested hand cream that protects against poison ivy, osk and sumac—among other skin hazards—has been made available.

In clinical tests conducted by a large railroad on section hands, 100% effectiveness was reported. Over 70% of these men hand previously suffered from try poisoning or dermatitis caused by other plants, yet the tests were concluded without a single occurence of dermatitis, according to Dr. J. Jewell, medical director of Agrest Laboratories, New York, makers of the new safety cream, Kerodex. Easy to apply, offering as much as 4-hour protection, Kerodex is non-greasy, does not smear. It has proved equally effective in industry, the dispensary and at home—where strong soaps or detergents are a constant irritant.
