-Life Is Like That-

(Continued from Page Two) life been." Even at 130 years, Jacob was acutely aware of the brevity of life. The longest life viewed against the background of eternity is but an infinitesimal (infinitely small) fraction of a fractional part of the stuff we call time. And, if one's life has any value at all, it is not a matter of years but spirit, thought, ideas, ideals and character.

In the Old Testament, we read about a group of men who are supposed to have lived hundreds of years. We read with envy their genealogical table. The life of each was so long; ours so short.
