WANT TO AID DIGESTION? TAKE TEA AND SEE!

AMERICAN WOMEN ARE BY THEIR VERY NATURE, natural hunters! We're constantly on the look-out for information and clues that will improve family health or add more enjoyment to the family meals. And so, by virtue of the fact that this is TAKE TEA AND SEE WEEK, we've gone on a safari through an interesting and authentic pamphlet on tea entitled, "Physiological and Psychological Effects of Tea," for information.

According to Dr. I. Phillips Frohman, Chairman, Section of General Practice, American Medical Association, "... after a hearty meal, there's nothing like a good hot cup of fragrant tea. Unlike other beverages which contain volatile oils which retard digestion, tea's tannins (not to be confused with tannic acid) aid digestion. That's why tea with meals leaves you with a just right feeling—not a feeling of having eaten too much..."

Another important bit of information we hunted up is that unless you use boiling water and 1 teaspoonful or 1 teabag per cup, and let it brew from 2-5 minutes, you're forfeiting all the good in the tea leaves. Don't stint on the amount of tea you use, or the length of brewing time. If you like weak tea—add piping hot water after the brewing period.

Another idea we've hunted up for a meal-in-minutes is Yam Crowned Ham Slice. All you need shop for is ¼-inch slice of ham, a small can of crushed pineapple, and a No. 2 can of yams. While you're at the market, be sure you have plenty of tea on hand. It comes in ¼-pound (48-50 cups) and ½-pound packages (98-100 cups) in both loose tea or teabags. You couldn't find a less expensive clue in a hunt for mealtime enjoyment!

YAM CROWNED HAM SLICE
(Makes about 4 servings)

1 No. 2 can of Louisiana Yams, Salt and pepper to taste drained and mashed 1 ham steak, cut ¼ inches thick
3 tablespoons melted butter ¼ cup crushed pineapple
¼ cup brown sugar

Combine yams, butter, salt and pepper; mix well. Place ham on rack in shallow baking pan and spread with yam mixture. Top with crushed pineapple. Sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 45 minutes, or until pineapple is lightly browned. Baste occasionally during baking period with drippings.

A WORD ABOUT SCOUTING

BY HENRY W. GILLIS
District Scout Executive

What's New For Boy Scout Week? "We want something NEW for Boy Scout Week. Every year we do the same five or six things over again. What can we have new for 1956?" an enthusiastic unit leader asked at our roundtable meeting. "I know about blue and gold banquets, window displays, courts, of honor, etc. But what's NEW?" This was what the commissioner wanted to hear. "Yes, he admitted," "I know how you feel. But actually most of your Boy Scout Week celebration will be new, won't it? Let me show you."

He smiled at the perplexed look on the leader's face and paused a moment to let curiosity build up to a climax. Then he continued, "First there's our New Four-Year Program. We'll be thinking a lot about the importance and purposefulness of Scouting as we launch the 'Onward for God and My Country' emphasis during Boy Scout Week. Just that one item makes it different from anything we have ever done.

parents to understand the importance of the child's convalescence, and suggests ways to keep him interested during the time he must spend in bed.

The bulletin is one of a series prepared by the Bureau for parents whose children have handicapping conditions. It is available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., for 10 cents a copy.

Tatum-Haynes' Magicians Will Show In Raleigh

WATERBURY, CONN. The Harlem Magicians are now playing their first Southern tour under the ownership, and playing leadership, of Reece (Goose) Tatum and Marques Haynes.

After opening at Richmond, Va., on December 23, the Magicians were scheduled to make 18 appearances in West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida before mid-January.

In most of these appearances, opposition will be supplied by the strong New York Olympians, headed by Bill Spivey, 7-foot former University of Kentucky All-American.

In 1953 and 1954, the Magicians played games in the South, but they then were under the sole ownership of Haynes, "the world's greatest dribbler" and former Harlem Globetrotters player.

This year the Magicians are owned in partnership by Haynes and Tatum, world-famed court clown and all-time great former Harlem Globetrotters scorer.

Tatum proved in recent games at Philadelphia and Washington that he has lost none of his scoring ability. At Philadelphia, he scored 44 points and, a few nights later, at the Capitol, he scored 62 points as the Magicians defeated the Olympians, 98 to 92.

Spivey scored 42 points for the losers while Haynes contributed 28 markers. Thus Haynes and Tatum scored 90 of their team's 98 points themselves.

Such performances by the Magicians' co-owners become all the more remarkable when one considers that not only do they play basketball every week night, often twice on Sundays, but they must also coach and manage the club, make publicity

Advice Issued For Parents On Child Disease

WASHINGTON, D. C. Information for parents on rheumatic fever in children is contained in a booklet, "The Child with Rheumatic Fever" issued by the Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

While most cases of rheumatic fever now can be prevented with prompt treatment of strep infections, which precede the fever, the disease is still serious because the heart can be affected during its acute stage. The new bulletin describes to parents the preventive value of early treatment and also the role which sulfa and penicillin can play in warding off recurrent attacks.

The danger signs which may point to an attack of rheumatic fever, such as strep throat, fever, pain and swelling in the joints, are described in the bulletin.

"The Child with Rheumatic Fever" places particular emphasis on prevention through early diagnosis and treatment by a physician. It also helps appearances and travel arrangements, and check the box-office before and after games.

They are assisted in management by a staff of regional officials and by Boyd Bule, one-armed former Tennessee State star, who also plays.

The current Magicians squad is a collection of former college stars who were banded together for practice at Las Vegas, Nev., last summer. Their tour of the United States, Canada and Mexico comprises a 160-game schedule.

A portion of the southern tour is as follows:

Dr. James L. Cathell, acting superintendent, brought greetings from the hospital staff and Ben Aiken, business manager, brought greetings from the business office, farm, laundry, maintenance, and engineering departments.

A dance followed the party for those who wished to remain. Music was provided by a record player.

Fred Fearington was master of ceremonies and Miss Florine Grissom was pianist. Rev. Limon Gooch gave the invocation and a committee headed by Mr. Fearington helped the recreation department in planning the party.
