Marshall Shepard Addresses Fayetteville Founder's Day Rite

FAYETTEVILLE — Featuring as guest speaker Dr. Marshall L. Shepard, for the past 31 years, Pastor of the Mount Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church in Philadelphia, the Founders' Day exercises at the Fayetteville State Teachers College were a huge success this year. Dr. Shepard's address centered about our need for a double portion of the faith and the spirit of the founders of the College. He was also guest minister at the First Baptist Church (Maxwell and Franklin Streets) Sunday. Graduates and former students from all sections of North Carolina—and from adjoining states—were in attendance to participate in the program that went forward on Saturday and Sunday, April 6 and 7. An impressive ceremony at the monument of Dr. E. E. Smith followed Dr. Shepard's address.

By way of initiating the week end of exercises, the Future Alumni Club, sponsored by Vivian O. Windley of the Area of Education staged an interesting assembly program, centered about the presentation of an assortment of former graduates who have gone out as successful teachers, ministers, dentists, law-enforcement officers, and school principals.

The speaker for the occasion was Phyllis O'Kelly, instructor at the Jane Porter Borrett School in Peeks, Virginia. She was introduced by Mae Rudd Williams, Basileus of the Gamma Cpsilon Zeta Chapter of the local Zeta Phi Beta Sorority. The plaque was presented to Mrs. Fuller by Basileus Evelyn-tyne Humphrey of Omega Beta. Mrs. Fuller has the distinction of being the founder of the Fayetteville School for Exceptional Children.

Mrs. Fuller has always had an impulse for humanity. Her trips to the old folks home with her parents in Norfolk, Virginia at the age of 7 probably helped to determine the direction of her work, although she was inclined toward the profession of a teacher and that of a foreign missionary. A mother of five children (one of them a minister, the wife of a minister, an ardent worker in the community and in the church, and a woman whose sympathies go out for those in need, Mrs. Fuller fully qualifies for the "Woman of the Year" in the Fayetteville.

The list included William Bridges, Cumberland County teacher; Walter Burton, principal, Woodson School, Richland; Dr. G. L. Butler and Dr. Charles Cherry, Fayetteville dentists; Mary Cherry, Fayetteville City librarian; Vernice Frederick, Fayetteville teacher, William R. Hill, principal, Armstrong High School, Fayetteville; Lonnie J. Lockamy, principal, J. W. Seabrook School, Margaret Lockamy, teacher, Lewis Chapel School, Fayetteville, N. C.; Clarence McDonald, assistant principal, Ashley School, Elizabethtown, N. C.; Edward Taylor, law enforcement officer, Fayetteville, N. C.; and the Rev. Frank Weaver, minister and principal, Willow Grove School at Tarboro.

The Alumni Founders' Day Committee included Mabel Powell, Chairman, E. M. Ferguson, Lafayette Parker, E. P. McMillan and Vivian O. Wind-

Carnathus Moyer, seaman, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Watt Moyer of 1338 Morgan, Spray, is presented a letter of commendation by Navy Capt. Henry A. Renken, Commanding Officer of the Atlantic Fleet tactical command ship USS Northampton. He received his commendation March 7 for contributing to the highly successful outcome of his ship's material inspection conducted by the U. S. Naval Board of Inspection and Survey during February.

The Northampton is on a training exercise in the North Atlantic. The ship visited Norway, Greenock, Scotland, Oslo, Stockholm, and Sweden, and will return to her home port of Norfolk, Va., during the first week in April.

Flower Club Hears Talk
