ALL ABOUT ROSES

Roses scare some gardeners. They think of them in terms of secret rites at planting time, of chemical drenches during summer and of a dormant mystery over the winter. We say this just isn't so. To us roses are a wonderful world of buds and blooms and perfumed bouquet worth a thousand times the effort put into them. If you have roses in your garden now, here's a refresher course on their care. If you've never planted one, here's your introduction to that wonderful world.

Give climbing roses something to climb on. A trellis or fence can offer support, but only if you keep lengthy canes tied up. To protect plants from damage in severe winter areas, cut them loose from support, tie canes in a neat bundle, lay it on ground with light cover of soil. In the spring, cut out dead canes.

ROOT TREATMENT

When you first get roses, their roots will probably be stiff, wrapped tightly in a vertical position. To make planting easier, soak roots overnight in water. The roots are sensitive to sun and wind, dig holes before exposing them. Keep them in water until the last minute, or covered with a piece of moist burlap.

Plant roses where they will receive full sun for at least half of every day. Dig holes wide enough to allow the root to spread out naturally — don't cramp them. Loosen soil in bottom of the hole, then mound it up into a cone-shaped base for the plant to rest on. Firm cone with hands.

-Spiritual-

(Continued from page Two) freed from the enslavements of prejudice, custom, tradition and evil practices, Jesus releases the vast energies of our souls for God and man.

LOVE FOR LEGALITY
Stephen's life itself was a vivid illustration of what God can do with a soul that is freed from the prison of custom and tradition. He left behind a past pregnant with custom and tradition. He left behind a past of sin. Christ set him free and had led him into the glorious life of the redeemed. He did the same with the life of Peter, the first great leader of the early church. Look what he did with the life of Paul as he changed him from a Pharisaic past of rigid custom and tradition. In Christ, love takes the place of legalistic tradition. Christ helped to move India from the custom of untouchability. Christ has moved men from cannibalism to love and self denial.

And, in Christ, and only in Christ, can we in our time break the enslaving claims of the prevailing custom of the sin of segregation and lead ourselves and our brothers into the new way of dignity and true human fellowship.
