

MUSICAL NOTES

By CELIA DAVIDSON

It is hoped that this column will become a regular feature of this newspaper. This reporter having her share of the human frailties, and like so many others, has griped (and sometimes most vocally) about the sins of omission supposedly committed by the various media of communication. Recently, I again decried the lack of space and attention given to musical events. The decision was made to channel this energy - expended on complaints - into constructive paths for rectifying the oversight. This column will be dedicated to good music. There is an abundance of good classical music; there are many bad compositions hiding behind this mask. There is good jazz - modern and New Orleans; there is bad jazz.

It is not our aim to imitate (on the local scene, the criticisms and writing of that Washington critic, who was propelled unintentionally to international stardom by Harry Truman several years ago.

What are our present aims? We want to bring to you the announcements and notes about programs of musical interest in this area. This might develop into a weekly calendar. We will spotlight personalities from this area who are carving niches for themselves in the world of the young concert artists. It is our desire to delve from time to time into the fascinating world of the high fidelity and stereophonic fan. This is an often controversial and always interesting conversational subject. Your suggestions and ideas will be of invaluable help.

MISSING CHANCES

Two recent events - the Omega Talent Hunt Program for high school students, and the visit to the college by the representative for a national foundation aiding talented musicians - have emphasized to me the need for and the advantages of meaningful cultural experiences both as participants and listeners for the young members of our community.

The Spivakovsky concert in B. N. Duke Auditorium pointed up the regretful fact that the future patrons of the arts are not taking advantage of those opportunities presently available. Many excuses are made; some of them are valid. However, the serious fact remains that something should be done.

Many of these "absent listeners" are students enrolled in hand and other music courses. A number of them are taking private music lessons. Regardless of how competent and miracle-producing the instructors are, if these courses are pursued in a vacuum and are allowed to remain there, half of the value of these courses are lost. Whether the student takes piano, voice, or flute - for his own enjoyment as a hobby or as an avenue to a further vocation - he will gain immeasurable information that can never be taught adequately in class just in attending a concert, by performing on programs, or by entering competition.

North Carolina College Choir To Be Heard In Concert Thurs.

The North Carolina College Choir under the direction of Samuel W. Hill, will present its annual spring concert Thursday evening, March 19 in B. N. Duke Auditorium at 8:15 o'clock.

Two cantatas, "Gallia" by Gounod and Howard Hanson's "Song of Democracy" will be the feature numbers.

Mrs. Elna Spaulding, soprano, of Durham will be the guest soloist in the Gounod number.

Other soloists are Doris Brown, soprano, and Robert Howie, tenor.

Other numbers on the program include: "Prologue," Wm. Schuman; "Alleluia," Bach; "Blow, Blow Thou Winter Wind," Clokey;

"The Wanderer," Lekberg; "Hope," Mueller; "My Spirit Sang All Day," Find; a group of spirituals: "By and By," "I stood on the River of Jordan," "Many Wore Three Links of Chain," and "Little David Play on Your Harp."

The choir will present a group of three songs by American composers, "Jim along Josey," Imig and Simon; "Peter Piper," Whitledge and "Give me Your Tired, Your Poor" Irving Berlin.

Celia Davidson will be at the organ and Barbara Massey will be at the piano.

The public is cordially invited to attend this concert.

Commerce-Home Economics Event Expected To Draw 1,500 Students

Some 1,500 high school students and teachers are expected at North Carolina College Friday for a joint Commerce-Home Economics Day program.

Registration will be held from 9:00 to 10:00 a.m. in the Home Economics Building before the first general home economics program starts at 10:00 a.m. in the auditorium of the Education Building.

Participants will be Miss La Vetra Armstrong, traveling home economist for McCall's; Dr. Frank Tolliver of the State Department of Public Instruction, and R. E. Wiggins of the North Carolina State College School of Textiles, Raleigh.

All sessions for the commercial part of the program will be held in the Commerce Building where registration starts. Demonstrations of office machinery and equipment will be held during the morning at 9:00 a.m. on the first floor.

Dr. Helen G. Edmonds, graduate professor of history, will deliver a public address at 12:00 noon in Duke Auditorium for the occasion.

Dr. Mary F. Suggs and E. W. Phillips, teachers in the department, will present a special seminar for high school teachers of business at 2:30 p.m.

Other items on the agenda include the finals of the state typing contest, presentation of typing awards at 4:00 p.m. and a campus-wide social at 8:00 p.m. in the Women's Gymnasium.

NCC President Alfonso Elder will welcome campus visitors at 10:00 a.m. in the Commerce Building. Among speakers during this part of the program are Mrs. Bernice Johnson of Merrick Moore School; "The Significance of Home Economics Day," Dean Louise M. Latham, "Campus Activities for Women," Dr. R. D. Russell, NCC Counselor. "Opportunities for Scholarship."

Others on the program who will introduce speakers or make short talks are Mrs. Lucy F. James and Mrs. Marie C. Moffitt, itinerant teacher trainers, and Miss Mary J. Harris, chairman of the home economics day committee.

The college's Cooley-Winchell Home Economics Club will present music and participate in the awarding of some $225 in scholarships to study home economics at NCC.
