KUDZU INCOME—Jack Wilson, 2nd from right, Camp Hill, Ala., farmer, counts on a great about $1,500 every year from digging and selling kudzu crowns during early winter as one of his several sideline enterprises.

The crowns are sold to farmers who want to begin growing the ivy-like plant to help halt erosion, as well as provide grazing for their livestock. Looking at the crowns with Wilson in a field of kudzu are one of his sons, Fovace, Freddie L. Tinsley, a neighbor, and George H. Paris, right, farm management specialist of the Farmers Home Administration's state office in Ala. Inset is a closeup of a kudzu crown, USDA Photo.

16 GROUPS SEND STATEMENT Women's Organization Urges White House Confab On Youth Not to Overlook Issue of Segregation

NEW YORK—Leaders of sixteen national women's organizations voiced concern Friday lest the far-reaching White House Conference on Children and Youth ignore the issue of racial equality in the nation's schools.

In a 50-page report issued on the eve of the conference, the National Organizations of Women ("NOW") for Equality in Education urged that the golden anniversary White House meeting "face up to the problem of segregation and seek a golden answer that will lift the horizon for all Americans."

The report called for "vigorous action" by all branches of government in enforcing the Supreme Court, desegregation decision. A special section of the report suggested ways by which women could promote positive attitudes toward integration in their home communities.

A coalition of sixteen national women's church and civic groups representing 14,000,000 women of different races and religions, "NOW for Equality" was organized last year as the first women's interracial coordinating council for joint activity in combating segregation. In Washington last month some 300 delegates of "NOW" member organizations from all sections of the country mapped plans for mobilizing church, parent-teacher and community organizations in behalf of school integration.

The "NOW" report emphasized the harmful effects of segregation on white as well as Negro children and cited a "growing awareness on the part of American women" that the denial of equal education opportunities was "casting a terrible blight" on the inner welfare of all children.

"Negro mothers have suffered for their children as they saw the denial of education that would make it possible for their children to fulfill their potential," Justice Justice Wise Poller of the New York Domestic Relations Court declared in the report.

"Mothers of white children have also begun to realize," she said, "that the apparent benefits of preferred treatment based on color, with its false assumption of superiority, its demands for wrongful treatment of other children and its alienation from children of other races was creating moral conflicts, insensitivity and deterioration of the personal morality of their own children."

The "NOW for Equality" report expressed concern "that the greatest single issue facing our nation's schools — the issue of equality for all our children — be relegated to an unworthy spot by the White House Conference that is directed to plan for the youth of our nation for the coming decade."

"Sunday every effort to avoid this issue, to prevent its full exploration or to provide palatable opiates would be unworthy of the occasion and of the needs of our children," the report declared.

The report will be distributed among individual members of the sixteen "NOW for Equality" sponsor organizations who will serve as delegates to the White House Conference.

An analysis of youth attitudes toward racial integration and civil liberties sponsored by "NOW for Equality" with the aid of a grant from the Field Foundation. The analysis, coordinated by Dr. Martin Hamburger of New York University, was based on the Purdue University continuing study of 10,000 American high school students in all sections of the country. Among the findings were:

(1) Mothers' educational level had a very significant effect in determining attitudes toward segregation, particularly in the South.

(2) Liberal views on freedom of speech, press, religion, etc., existed side by side with racial bigotry among the majority of the youths polled.

(3) Attitudes toward various types of integration differed sharply from one kind of interracial contact to another.

A charge that school segregation has a "corrosive effect" on white pupils by making a "mockery" of morality, religion and democracy. In the report, Dr. Kenneth Clark of The City College of New York says that the "moral quandary" of youth who are taught about the Bill of Rights in schools where Negro students are barred leads to feeling of "guilt, cynicism and contempt." Dr. Clark, who is president of the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues says that the "teen-age bigots" of Little Rock and other Southern cities are the "end result of the process of dehumanization resulting from the stunted and provincial attitudes learned in segregated schools."

A psychiatrist's statement that the "unconscious purposes served by prejudice" in building up self-esteem among whites solely of the basis of their color accounts in "large measure" for Southern resistance to integration. Dr. Viola Bernard of Columbia University noted in the report that the short-term value" of such self-esteem in son replaced by the "permanent damage" that bigotry and hatred do to the human personality.

A report that many Southern youths are "twenty years ahead of their parents" in their attitudes toward accepting integration, noted in the report a "resurgence of moral courage among large numbers of white high school and college students in the South, a courage that challenges their parents and their teachers to change Southern attitudes and customs on the race issue."

MORGAN BUSINESS MANAGER QUILTS FOR JOB AT NEW YORK

BALTIMORE, MD. — Edgar D. Draper has resigned his position as Business Manager of Morgan State College to join the staff of the Center for International Studies of New York University.

Draper leaves his Morgan post on March 31 and assumes his new duties as Administrative Assistant of the Center's African Project on April 1.

A graduate of Howard University with the Master of Public Administration degree from New York University, Draper has served as Business Manager of Morgan to the past seven years.

Mock Political Convention to be Held at Morgan

BALTIMORE, MD. — For 750 college boys nominating a Democratic Presidential hopeful takes place April 1 in Baltimore not July 11 in Los Angeles.

Causing that shift in time and place is the Mock Democratic Convention being sponsored by the Ford Foundation-Financed Institute for Political Education of Morgan State College.

Mock through it is — and falling by sheer but happy coincidence on April Fool's Day — the Morgan convention will be marked by realism with Paul M. Butler, Democratic National Committee Chairman, as the keynote.

The convention properly keyed to patriotic musical accompaniment, the delegates will get down to the serious business of establishing committees, writing reports, etc.

Nomination of candidates will come at 1:30 p. m., with voting scheduled for 3:30 p. m. Announcement of the vote is to come at 4:30 p. m.

Delegates participating will include in addition to Morganites, students from Howard University, Baltimore Junior College Western Maryland, Salisbury State Teachers College, Hood, and Loyola of Baltimore.

Fayetteville Nine Ready

FAYETTEVILLE—With Herbert "Hubie" Doub as the Head Coach, the Fayetteville State Teachers College has fielded a baseball team after a lay-off of two years, and the group, held back by the bad weather, is working out in earnest to be ready for their season opener against Shaw University on Saturday, April 2.

The game played on the Fayetteville campus will provide the new talent the opportunity to show their metal in an actual game situation. Only five lettermen are going through the daily drills—Robert Gordon of Rye, New York, pitcher; Claiborne Johnson of Charleston, West Va., outfielder; Henry Hamilton of East Orange, N. J. also an outfielder; Wilber Jenkins of Hamlet, pitcher; and Breness Smith of New Rochelle, New York, outfielder.

New England Schools Join In Protest Against Chain Stores

BOSTON, MASS. — Three hundred and fifty students, labor workers, veterans and members of various organizations picketed ten F. W. Woolworth stores in historic Boston last Saturday.

Negro and white members of the Emergency Public Integration Committee have picketed Woolworth stores in the greater Boston area for 4 consecutive Saturdays, showing support for Negro colleagues in their fight to end lunch counter segregation.

EPIC draws its membership from Harvard, Brandeis, Boston University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the N. A. A. C. P., Congress of Racial Equality, American Veterans Committee, International Ladies' Garment Workers, and the United Packing Workers.

Although picketers carrying signs and handing out flyers are a curious sight to Bostonians, they are in keeping with a history rich with movements for the protection of individual rights.

Despite scarce funds and a lack of news coverage from Boston dailies — a 12 line story appeared in two Boston newspapers near the want-ads — EPIC has grown steadily from an initial membership of 110 to its present 350.

EPIC claims one-third of its membership as Negroes, many of whom have never been exposed to racial crises southern style but their feelings are as deep and expressive as their co-workers who have been left with mental scars after blunt encounters with southern segregation.

A young Negro carrying a picket sign explained his reasons for helping to EPIC: "I picketed in the Army, except there I was carrying a rifle for freedom." "It's the same thing — except this is a placard."
