

Artist's Conception of New Cemetery Fixture

Marble Replica of Famed Italian Drawing in Durham Cemetery

The "PRAYING HANDS", a cemetery feature done in Italian white Carrara marble and imported from Milan, Italy, arrived in Durham last week. This feature was sculptured from an original drawing of Albrecht Durer (1471-1528), a famous German Renaissance painter and engraver. The original drawing now hangs in the Albertina Museum in Vienna and the value of this drawing is indeterminate due to its historical value. In recent years, copies of this drawing have been used on Christmas cards and many other pieces of religious literature. Readers Digest ran an article on this work of art sometime ago.

Italian sculpturers conceived the idea of making this masterpiece into a piece of outdoor art work, thus the cemetery industry became interested in using it as a garden feature. Through the facilities of United Cemetery Consultants, the Glennview Memorial Park has secured the first copy of this work to arrive in the United States. It will be installed in the Garden of Devotion at Glennview. Instead of the "HOLY BIBLE" which was originally planned. Even though the cost of the "PRAYING HANDS" is several times that of the original memorial it was felt that this would not only be practical, but also an outstanding cultural contribution to the community.

The Glennview Memorial Park, located on Highway No. 55 (Apex Highway) is a locally owned organization chartered by the Secretary of State and is operated under the supervision of the North Carolina Burial Commissioner. The Mechanics and Farmers Bank serves as Trustee of the growing Trust Fund maintained to assure perpetual care of the cemetery.

-G.O.P.

(Continued from front page)
lities and supports the principle of protest similar to the one waged by southern sit-down students, had already received endorsement of Vice President Richard Nixon, certain choice for the presidential nomination, and Governor Rockefeller.

(Leaders of southern delegations had also indicated their reluctant acceptance of the platform without making a floor fight. Earlier it was expected that a battle in the convention by southerners was almost assured if the strong civil rights plank was placed in the platform.)

State chairman William E. Cobb and National Committeewoman Mrs. Louise R. Rogers told a Sunday afternoon caucus of the delegation that they had been in the city for more than a week working religiously to stall off any civil rights proposal that had teeth in it.

Mrs. Rogers told the delegation that the subcommittee chairman Joseph F. Carlino had used practically every means at his command to ram such a plank down the committee's throat.

She declared that Carlino had picked Rockefeller to serve on the body.

Mrs. Rogers asserted, however, that she was prepared along with other members of the committee to stay up long and late and to protest loudly and long for a plank suitable to the south.

After an all night stand Sunday, Mrs. Rogers' efforts appeared headed for certain defeat by midday Monday when vice-president Richard Nixon arrived to take charge of things.

Nixon made it plain that he would accept nothing less than a plank with teeth in it. He huddled with several members of the committee, then told reporters Tuesday morning he had confidence that he would get the kind of plank he could stand on.

Governor Rockefeller, who came to town for the second time Sunday, also had told newsmen that he stood for a strong civil rights plank.

He repeated this position on Sunday night when he shared the platform with NAACP Secretary Roy Wilkins to address some 5,500 persons crowded into Liberty Baptist Church.

Sim DeLapp, former state chairman for North Carolina and Lexington lawyer, was instrumental in calming the North Carolina delegation.

He reminded the delegation that the nominee would have the last word on the platform regardless of what the delegates did and urged them to be cautious in their opposition to the plank.

Fewer cows, but more milk per cow. That continues to be the trend on dairy farms all over the country, the National Dairy Council reports. The U. S. cow population hit an all time low of 19.3 million heads in 1959, while the trend in milk output per cow has been rising steadily.

MINISTERS JOIN PICKETS —

Three New Bern ministers joined Youth Council Marchers on picket lines in front of variety stores in that city Saturday. Thousands of spectators were attracted to see the Reverends G. J. Hill, Shade Marshburn and Dr. A. Hillary Fisher take their places with the youngsters, as these two photographs show. A Youth Council spokesman said the action of the ministers furnished the group added inspiration in their efforts.

Weight watchers will be interested to know that dairy foods are relatively low in calories. At the same time, no other food group furnishes the quantity and diversity of essential nutrients as dairy foods. In other words they're packed with nutrition per calorie.

MRS. SANSOM

MRS. NEWELL

MRS. LEWIS

ANDERSON

Appointments to Shaw University Faculty Are Announced

(Continued from front page)
appointments; Mrs. Louise W. Lewis, also of Raleigh, registrar's assistant; James K. Kofa, of Monticello, Liberia, instructor of business education; and Mrs. Dora Harris Anderson, secretary to the dean.

Anderson received the Bachelor of Science and Master of Arts degrees at the University of Pittsburgh and he has pursued further studies at the University of Chicago, the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Omaha.

He served as Business Manager and Associate Professor of Economics at Saint Augustine's College during the 1956-57 school year. He is presently employed as Associate Professor in Economics and Business Manager at Warren Institute, Philadelphia.

Anderson is married to the former Miss Dora Cordelia Harris of Tuskegee, Alabama. They are the parents of two children.

Dr. Tilly, pastor of New Metropolitan Baptist Church of Baltimore, Maryland, will serve tentative as alumni and public relations director until October 15, at which time it will be determined whether he will accept permanent appointment to the position.

1944 and during this period served as head of the Theological Department, the first dean of the School of Religion (organized in 1933).

Mrs. Sansom is a native of Durham. She received the A.B. degree at Talladega College, and the M.Ed. degree at Boston University. She has done special study in physical education at Sargent College.

Prior to her present position she was directress of Physical Education for Women at North Carolina College at Durham. She also served as head of the Health Physical Education and Recreation Department at the Patterson Avenue Young Women's Christian Association in Winston-Salem.

Mrs. Newell, a graduate of Talladega, and New York University, has taught at high schools in Winston-Salem, Aiken, Ga., Clarkston and Raleigh.

A native of Raleigh, Mrs. Lewis has held previous positions with ary society. He is a member of the White Rock Baptist Church in Durham.

For six months during 1958, Schooler was a guide and interpreter at the United States exhibit at the Brussels World Fair.

--Draft

(Continued from front page)

ers. However, Battle has been one of Dr. Johnson's strongest friends since he rose to the rank of Grand Exalted Ruler. Johnson succeeded the legendary Honorable J. Finley Wilson.

Dr. Wilson served as Grand Exalted Ruler for more than 30 years. Under his leadership the Order grew to be one of the largest and most powerful fraternal bodies in the world.

Local Elk delegates will swarm on Chicago to actively support the North Carolina choice for the top Grand Lodge post.

Rev. Battle is the husband of the former Miss Annis Wimberly. Miss Wimberly is the daughter of the late eminent Honorable Dred Scott Wimberly, who was at one time one of the most outstanding and respected State Legislators in North Carolina politics.

the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company in Raleigh, the C. J. Walker Cosmetics Company of Indianapolis, Ind., St. Agnes hospital, of Raleigh, and the North Carolina State Employment Security Commission in Raleigh.

Kofa received the A.B. degree from Clark College, and the M.A. in Business Administration at Atlanta University. He taught previously at Blayton School of Accounting in Atlanta.

ing resources available. Included in the curriculum laboratory are nearly 340 textbooks, workbooks, and manuals; 250 research bulletins, monographs and circulars; samples of teaching devices; units of work and professional books. Seated at the table is Barbara Hudson, assistant in Early Childhood Education, Hampton Institute, who is inspecting one of the more than 100 trade books for children.

TEACHER PREPARES — The fifth graders in the Fuquay Springs (N. C.) consolidated school will benefit next fall because of the research done by their teacher, Lillie Mae Clemons (standing), in the curriculum laboratory at Hampton Institute. The laboratory, which was started last year by Dr. Martha Dawson, associate professor of education, provides a place for teachers to familiarize themselves with some of the teach-

--Creedmoor

(Continued from front page)
ville Improvement Association, an organization which also seeking removal of Hawley as principal of the Negro high school.

The Association, headed by the Rev. L. M. Gooch, has so far been unsuccessful in getting support from school and County officials for its requests.

The Board of Education a few weeks ago informed the Association after a meeting on subject of Hawley's removal, that the complaints against the principal were too general and that he would remain as principal for the coming term.

At that time, the Board did leave the way open for further talks.

Since then, Mrs. E. E. Green, secretary of the Association detailed a list of charges against the principal in a letter to the Oxford Ledger.

Observers believe the integration attempt is a last ditch resort by the parents to obtain relief in the situation.

It is believed that complaining parents would prefer their children to attend the white school rather than Hawley high if Hawley remains as principal.

There was no rush by Negroes at either store for service. Only nine had been served by four p.m. at Woolworth on Monday.

Greensboro was the city in which four A&T College freshmen triggered the south-wide movement last February against segregation.

In Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va., Saturday, Woolworth, Kress and Grant stores opened their counters to Negro patrons. A few ministers and their friends were served first under a pre-arranged plan without incident.

Elizabeth City's counters were opened on July 11. Lunch counters in High Point and Charlotte were opened earlier this summer, as were those in Arlington, Va.

Chapel Hill was the first North Carolina city to make the step.

--C.M.E.

(Continued from front page)
In the proceedings, the Rt. Rev. W. Y. Bell, of South Boston, presiding bishop of the North Carolina Conference, is scheduled to deliver the conference's climax sermon on the final day of the meeting Sunday, Aug. 7th, 7th.

Also expected to be on hand for the conference are the Reverends J. C. Clark, presiding elder of the Winston-Salem district, and the Rev. J. A. Davis, presiding elder of the Durham district.

The general theme of this year's conference is "The Church and its social responsibility in a changing world."

--Curfew

(Continued from front page)
and a pistol were confiscated.

There were no serious injuries reported in the disorders.

In addition to the fights, a bomb threat at the Kress store was telephoned to police. No bomb was discovered after a search.

Sit-ins were conducted at Kress and at the courthouse last week.

Demonstrations against segregation were also staged in Spartanburg and Columbia during the week.

--New Bern

(Continued from front page)
be circulated in every section of Eastern North Carolina. Circulation stations will be established in the many communities so that the people may be privileged to keep abreast of the times through the news items which will be provided for them.

The first issue of this new enterprise is now on the stands, and the people are strongly urged to support this venture which is designed to add stature to the area.

Card of Thanks

The Reverend and Mrs. R. W. Davis (Mabel H.) wish to thank their many friends for their acts of kindness and thoughtfulness during the recent illness of Mrs. Davis.

Fluid milk consumption in the United States after World War II increased by about 15 quarts annually, per person, and has continued at that rate. Long range nutrition research and education programs have helped to develop and maintain this greater consumption. Marketing experts agree. Other factors in this increase are the quantities of milk and other dairy foods made available to youngsters through the National School Lunch Program and the Special Milk Program. These two programs account for about 4 per cent of the annual milk consumption.

There may not be as much in the coffee as there used to be. But Americans fill this gap by using increased amounts of milk-cream mixtures, such as half and half. Usage of cream is only about two-thirds what it was during the late 1930's and during the World War II.