WOMAN TO WOMAN

By MILDRED PAYTON

School days present a special clothing care problem - spots and stains peculiar to the engagement. Suggestions for the removal of some of the most frequent offenders may help.

LEAD PENCIL MARKS are to be dealt with according to the fabric. They may be erased off some and washed off other fabrics. Sponge woolens with a half and half solution of water and alcohol.

INDELIBLE PENCIL MARKS will be spread by water, so sponge stain with alcohol or diluted alcohol, or, after testing material, soak. Materials that household bleach might damage can be sponged with peroxide containing a little sodium perborate.

CRAYON MARKS on washable material may be removed with soap and detergent and hot water. If trace remains, sponge with diluted alcohol. On non-washables sponge off with tetrachloride or other cleaning fluid.

CARBON PAPER STAINS usually wash out in good stiff suds. If non-washable, sponge stain with alcohol or diluted alcohol and rinse by sponging it with cool water.

INK STAIN removal depends on the kind of writing ink which made the stain. Some will wash out, while others are set by washing. Try a similar stain on the kind of fabric you wish to wash.

Chemists suggest soaking stained garment in cool water for thirty minutes, or even overnight. After soaking, rub them with soap or a synthetic detergent and wash in warm suds. If traces remain, use household bleach on cotton, linens and synthetics with special finish. On a special finishes use a sodium perborate hot bleach solution, made by adding a table-spoonful or two of sodium perborate to a cup of very hot water.

An ammonia solution (one half tablespoon to one cup water) is effective for removing ink stains. Any yellow stain remaining on washable material may be removed with a special iron rust soap or oxalic acid.

Acetone or cleaning fluid may be used to remove ball point inks. While harmless to most fabrics acetone damage acetate, Dynel, and Arnel.

TREAT ALL STAINS PROMPTLY Stains allowed to stand often become hopelessly set by washing, ironing or pressing.

Fashions Designed to Show Milady's "Inner Personality"

"Beautiful clothes alone do not make a woman. But clothing worn with dignity make a woman fashionable, attractive and refreshing." This approach to fashions will be demonstrated in Durham next Tuesday night Oct. 11 when the Ebony Fashion Fair is staged at Hillside high school auditorium.

The comment belongs to the director of the show, Mrs. Freda DeKnight, Home Service and Fashion Director for Ebony Magazine.

The show represents Mrs. DeKnight's theory of feminine beauty and fashions. She not only writes and organizes the Fashion Fair, but also acts as commentator.

After a summer in the world fashion centers of New York, Rome Florence and Paris where she collected new material for this year's show, Mrs. DeKnight revealed recently that this year's fashions will suggest styles that will help women to reveal their "inner personalities." Commenting on some of the styles in the 1960 line-up, Mrs. DeKnight said "good posture can work wonders and the graceful carriage will certainly help any woman express her feminine appeal with a flair, yet retain her own individuality."

The Fashion Fair started as a series of fashion shows for a few select cities but has since developed into a national project serving worthwhile charities all over the country.

Planned in 1958, the Fashion Fair was designed to show some of the loveliest Negro models in fabulous creations from some of the world's famous designers in several key cities.

But by the time the shows were organized and got started, they covered a number of interests, the biggest of which were those involving charity. Outstanding social and civic organizations were selected by Ebony as sponsors in each city. The sponsoring organization is required to donate the proceeds to a charity.
