SCHOOL MARKS 50TH YEAR

Sit-ins, Protests Supported By Cabinet Officer In NCC Talk

In an address before a formal ceremony in North Carolina College's 50th anniversary series, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Arthur S. Fleming declared Thursday that the schools of this country "must produce citizens who will protest discriminatory practices in any walk of life."

The cabinet official placed a strong endorsement on the sit-in movement against segregation as he addressed one in a series of programs at the college commemorating its 50th birthday.

The college also bestowed the degree of Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters on Secretary Fleming.

The degree was conferred upon the former college president by Dr. Alfonso Elder, president of North Carolina College.

Two other prominent men of affairs are scheduled to receive the honorary degrees during the anniversary series this week. They are Bascom Baynes, chairman of the NCC trustee board, and Asa T. Spaulding, one of the school's most illustrious alumni.

He is president of North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co. Dr. Howard Chidley, a benefactor of the school, and Guinea president Sekou Toure, were awarded honorary degrees previously by the school.

Fleming's address Thursday morning said the unprecedented attention being given American education now by the Federal government and other agencies is designed to create institutions capable of producing citizens "who will rediscover the concept of freedom and who will not desert the responsibilities that must be assumed if freedom is to be preserved."

"We need to produce citizens," he declared, "who will protest discriminatory practices in any walks of life, who recognize such as an unconstitutional denial of freedom."

"We need citizens who will agree with Governor Collins (of Florida) who said it is morally wrong to open one part of a store to people while denying them the right to trade in another part of that same store."

"We need citizens who will recognize the rights of fellow citizens."

A 46 year old farmer who admitted shooting his wife early Monday night in their bed room, then spending the night in the living room before calling police the next morning, was being held in Durham jail awaiting formal charges of murder.

Napoleon Hunter, resident of Nichols road in the northeastern edge of Durham County, is being held in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Mrs. Mattie Bland Hunter.

Coroner Dr. D. R. Perry said the woman died of a single bullet fired from a .22 calibre rifle, striking her in the center of the chest.

According to Durham County sheriff Jennis Mangum, Hunter said he shot the woman in a struggle over the gun.

Here is the way the man told the story of the shooting, Mangum said:

He and his wife became involved in an argument about his attentions to two other women. After he had gone to bed, his Race Provides Margin In N. C.

Negro Candidate Swept Under By Democratic Tide

Alexander Barnes, only Negro candidate in the Durham County race Tuesday, lost his third bid for the State legislature in a Democratic landslide in the county.

Barnes opposed incumbent Claude Currie, of Durham, and Willis Hancock, of Oxford, two Democrats, in the race for two seats from the 14th state senatorial district.

Both were swept into office by a big majority rolled up in Durham's 36 precincts.

Currie led the field in the county. See CANDIDATE, 6-A Negro voters, who turned out in large numbers all across the nation and the state played a key role in giving the Democratic party its victory nationally and in North Carolina.

Senator John F. Kennedy won the popular vote by the narrowest of margins but scored heavily in the key states which gave him a huge electoral lead.

The Negro vote in the key states of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Michigan and Illinois, helped him to his big lead.

A signed article by Bruce Jelly, appearing in the Thursday morning edition of the Greensboro Daily News, listed as the second most important factor in Kennedy's election, the Negro vote.

IN DURHAM NOV. 23 Hillside To Play For State Title

Hillside high school's football Hornets will play for the state triple A championship in Durham County Stadium on Thanksgiving eve, November 23.

This fact was revealed to the TIMES Tuesday by high school league commissioner Dr. W. T. Armstrong, of Rocky Mount.

But this was the only certainty to emerge from the high school football championship picture as play-offs in the triple and double A divisions were scheduled to start Friday.

Who will furnish opposition for the Hornets and the contenders for the state double A title will have to await results of play-off games this week-end and, possibly, on the following.

A 24-6 victory by E. E. Smith, of Fayetteville, over Epps, of Greenville, last Friday gave the Hornets their second straight eastern AAA title.

Hillside and Smith finished as leaders of the eastern division's two districts. But Armstrong explained that, according to league rules, a play-off between the two was not necessary since the Hornets already own a victory over Fayetteville.

The reason for the puzzle over opposition for the Hornets lies in the fact that the western championship in the triple A division could go to any of three powerful teams.

Stephens-Lee, of Asheville; Carver, of Winston-Salem; and William Penn, of High Point, are in the running for the western title.

Stephens-Lee has already won the district one title in the west, but Carver and William Penn must play off a tie for first place in district two. These two clubs meet at High Point to settle the issue

GOP REBUFFED Voters Know Democratic Party Is Best, Durham Leader Says

"Negroes know that as a minority group the Democratic party has supported and passed bills for the benefit of the masses."

This was the explanation by a Durham political leader of the overwhelming support of the Democratic ticket on the national and local levels.

It came from John S. Stewart, long-time member of the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs and prominent in the State Democratic party.

Negroes in Durham County cast approximately 72 percent of their vote for President-elect Senator John Kennedy and local Democratic nominees.

A strong bid by Republicans for the Negro vote in this area was looked upon in pre-election speculation as a threat to customary Negro solidarity for the Democratic party.

In one of the strikes aimed by Republicans at the Negro vote, former Brooklyn baseball hero

Jackie Robinson, now a restauran executive, made an appeal to Durham voters in behalf

Durham Sit-in Cases Going to Supreme Court

The North Carolina State Supreme Court will get an opportunity to pass on the constitutionality of the state's laws defining trespass.

This became apparent when attorneys for seven students convicted in Durham Superior Court on charges of trespass filed appeals with the State Supreme Court this week.

The seven students, five from North Carolina College and two from Duke University, were convicted and sentenced on trespass charges for taking part in a sit-in demonstration at the Kress store in Durham on May 6.

Judge Raymond B. Mallard in early July sentenced Donovan Phillips, Frank McGill Coleman and Callis Brown to 30 days on the roads.

He levied a judgement of 20 days in jail for Lacy Streeter and 15 days in jail for Thomas Avent.

Prayer for judgement against the two girls, Shirley Brown and Mrs. Joan Nelson Trumpower, was continued for two years.

C. O. Pearson, one of the attorneys for the students, said a major issue is the contention that enforcement of the state's trespass law is a violation of the defendants' constitutional rights.
