Federal Courts Knock Down Louisiana Bars; State May Try "Private" Schools

Angry Moms Blockade Two Mixed Schools

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Segregationists, deprived of their legal support by federal court rulings here this week, appeared to be leaning toward establishment of quasi-private schools in an effort to maintain racially segregated schools.

Best opinion in this southern metropolis felt that the Louisiana legislature would now resort to closing of the schools or of paying tuition grants to students to attend private, segregated schools.

This was regarded as the only step open since the legislature had seen fall in one day its entire framework for interposing state authority before the federal courts to keep segregation.

Christmas Boycott Looms In Six Cities

ATLANTA, Ga.—Announcement that Negroes in more than 300 communities in six southeastern states have launched a "No Christmas Gift Buying" drive was made here this week by a high official of the NAACP.

Ruby Hurley, the association's southeast regional director, said in a Thanksgiving Day statement that, "Negroes are not going to spend their money where they are not treated with dignity."

She is in charge of NAACP activities in Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Mrs. Hurley emphasized the bitterness felt toward merchants who refuse to treat them courteously and deny them employment.

"We are going to sacrifice buying Christmas presents in order to enjoy human dignity and freedom. And, we are going to let merchants in this region know that we will not be satisfied with less," Mr. Hurley declared.

The NAACP-sponsored Christmas withholding drive got off to a booming start in South Carolina last week, when more than 1,000 persons attending a mass meeting in Columbia passed a resolution calling for such action.

Roy Wilkins, principal speaker at the rally, gave the Christmas withholding drive the blessings of the Association's national office.

He told the cheering audience that, "It is just common sense to Judge J. Hugh McFarland meted out the sentence to Bobby Gene Headen, of near Chesnee, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Headen drew a sentence of three years, but the judge suspended its service.

Robert Lee Shirley, 25, of Long Beach, Calif., sustained a stomach wound in the incident.

"We just had a fight, and that's all I know," Headen said in court.

Couples Found Undressed In Old Dwelling

Two white men were arrested and jailed by police here Sunday morning, around 12:45 in a partially abandoned house, located at 530 Willard Street along with two young Negro girls, aged 13 and 14. The girls were found in the house with the men.

Although they were partially undressed when arrested, they denied having been in the house for immoral purposes. Both girls confessed, however, that they had had sexual relations with the men when police threatened to take them to a hospital for examination.

Being held in jail is Rudolph Peterson, age 41 and Jerry Wayne Warren, age 17. Peterson is reported to have been residing at the Willard Street address although the furnishings in the house only consisted of a dilapidated bed or couch and one or two chairs. Warren is reported to live with his parents on Route four. The names of the girls, who are sisters are being withheld because of their ages.

Search for the young girls was begun Saturday evening when their mother reported to police that they had not returned home after a late hour. They told police that they had been in the house with the men since around 5:00 P. M. Saturday.

The Washington Redskins professional football team is seeking Negro athletes this year.

Redskin coach Mike Nixon sent out letters to several coaches of Negro teams in this area asking their help in getting "good men at all positions."

North Carolina College coach Herman H. Riddick was one of the coaches to receive a request for players from the Redskins head coach.

The Redskins organization is regarded as strongly anti-Negro. No Negro athlete has won a Redskin uniform. Redskins owner Preston Marshall has publicly made known his feelings that he did not want Negro players on his team.

In addition, the organization has actively sought to make the team the South's representative in the National Football League. The organization has catered to white groups throughout the south in its promotions. It sponsors each year a day for many southern states, during which time state officials and other dignitaries are guests of the management.
