Nat'l Baptists Battling Again

Fist Fights Erupt At Convention In Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The National Baptist Convention again this year resulted in fist fights as the question of what to do about two presidents arose before the body of 5,000 delegates.

A total of 80 Kansas City police were called to the Municipal Auditorium to quell the chaos and confusion which arose as nominations for election of presidents were opened.

In a fist-swinging exchange near the speaker's platform in the auditorium, one delegate was injured and another suffered what appeared to be a heart attack. Police had to use blackjacks and nightsticks to restore order.

The fighting began when nominations for president were called. A delegation surrounded the Rev. Gardner Taylor of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the two controversial presidents and a candidate for this year's presidency, and moved toward the platform.

When the group moved up a wooden staircase to the platform, several delegates leaped from their seats and began throwing punches. See BAPTISTS, 6-A

RIVALS OPEN GRID SEASON

It's Blunt Vs. Edmonds Friday

EDMONDS

BLUNT

When Hillside and Merrick-Moore football teams take the field Friday night at County Stadium in the opening game of the football season, fans will see more than the combined efforts of two schoolboy aggregations matching their abilities against one another.

In a large measure, they will also be witnessing a clash of two dominant personalities in coaches Russell Blunt, of Hillside, and Harry (Choke) Edmonds, of Merrick-Moore.

For although the average fan may take home in his memory only the important plays or the outstanding players, the total pattern of the struggle will by a large measure be shaped by the two men who are at the helm of each of the battling teams.

Whatever Hillside and Merrick-Moore are able to do or fail to do on the County Stadium turf Friday night will be influenced by the two men who have spent the

Two Given Jobs In Sanford Administration

Two more Negroes, both North Carolina College professors, have been given assignments in the Sanford administration, it was revealed this week.

Dr. C. Elwood Boulware, professor of Mathematics, was picked by Governor Sanford to serve a six year term on the newly formed state advisory committee of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Professor James E. Parker, director of Audio-Visual Aids at N. C. College, was notified recently of his selection to the advisory committee on Educational Television by the State Board of Education.

Parker's appointment was made by the State Public Instruction Superintendent Charles Carroll.

Dr. Boulware, along with seven others, was sworn in in ceremonies at the Governor's office. See TWO, page 6-A

Collectors Call Another Strike

"We don't intend to go back until we get some consideration."

This was the firm decision of some 70 sanitation workers who early this week walked off their jobs in protest against low wages and "other grievances."

Their walk-out Tuesday morning, the second in a month, left the city's streets cluttered with trash and garbage, and fluttered the Department of Sanitation with phone calls from citizens seeking an explanation for the unremoved rubbish.

The men called their strike Tuesday morning after learning that no action had been taken on their request for a 13-cent an hour raise. They complained that the highest salary for garbage removers, some of whom have been on the job nearly 20 years, is $1.22 an hour, while many of the white truck drivers who have been working only two or three years are paid up to $1.75 per hour.

They said they had only received a 5 cent an hour raise in three years. A month ago, the men staged a walkout for the same reasons, but returned to work under the threat of being fired and a promise that the matter would be "looked into."

The only consideration given the garbage workers was the hiking of base pay for beginners from 91 cents per hour to a dollar. This move by the City Manager's office did not affect the present strikers, most of whom have been on the job for more than a year.

On Tuesday, the men gathered in an area near the incinerator on Camden St. to discuss their plight. They were met there by City Councilman J. S. Stewart and City Manager George Aull and were promised that if they returned to work, the City Council would elect a three-man committee to study the sanitation workers' problems and come to a reasonable solution. It was reported that under these conditions the men agreed to return to work.

However, after unfavorable results at the Council's Tuesday night meeting, garbage trucks were still idle and refuse was still piled high Wednesday morning.

The three-member committee was authorized by the council, but indications were that the men would not get a raise this year and that further work stoppages would result in loss of jobs.

Several of the councilmen termed the collectors' demands "threats" and said that to give in to them would be "appeasement."

During a discussion of the collectors' demands, Councilman Jas. Hawkins, who alone voted against the three-man committee, said, "The Budget was set and the merit system of pay raises agreed upon by the council.

"If any adjustments in salaries or raises is made now, it will harm the entire city working force. I do not feel that we should give in to their threats at this time."

Councilman Luther Barbour agreed with Hawkins and said, "I am for a committee to see if there are any grievances besides money, but I do not go along with taking money away from other departments to give them a raise at this

WOMEN KNOW THE ANSWERS

Only 3 Claim Mr. T's Cash; To Try Again Sat.

After canvassing several Durham neighborhoods for more than two hours, MR. CAROLINA T. was convinced that it's harder to give away money than he thought.

Or at least this seemed the case last Saturday when this mysterious newcomer to Durham canvassed the neighborhood looking for persons with copies of last week's CAROLINA TIMES in their homes.

To his surprise, Mr. T., with his pockets weighted down with money, had to return to his office with most of that money in his possession.

He could only find three persons who wanted some of his money. That's right . . . only three persons could produce a copy of last week's CAROLINA TIMES.

So MR. T. was only able to get rid of $3 . . . a dollar each to the three persons who were thoughtful enough to hang on to last week's paper.

Those persons whom MR. T. gifted with cash last week were Mrs. Florence Johnson, 502 Ramsey St.; Mrs. Alice Williamson, 613 Ramsey St. and Mrs. Rachel Smith, 514 Ramsey St.

These three charming ladies won themselves a dollar each and had the opportunity of hitting MR. T. for one of his $5 jackpot prizes, but they failed to answer a question taken from last week's paper.

MR. CAROLINA T. is a part of the LUCKY SIGN CONTEST sponsored by the CAROLINA TIMES. Each week, Mr. T. will canvass several neighborhoods in the city seeking someone who wants some free money.

Lincoln Hospital to Graduate 11 in Commencement Sunday

Eleven students of the Lincoln Hospital School of Nursing in Durham will graduate in formal exercises which get underway on Friday.

The climax of the commencement program comes Sunday when students receive nursing diplomas at the final exercises at St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church at four-thirty o'clock, September 10, 1961. Reverend Melvin Chester Swann, Minister of St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church, will deliver the commencement address.

Prospective graduates will begin the round of commencement activities on Friday night with the traditional Junior-Senior prom at the John Avery Boys Club. On Saturday at one o'clock, the graduates will be guest at a Luncheon given by the Alumnae Local Chapter.

The graduates and their home towns are as follows: Gloria Atkinson, Elm City; Evangeline Boone, Louisburg; Christine Coleman, Childersburg, Alabama; Roberta Elliot, Dunn; Eva Geer, Durham; Shirley Long, Danville; Marian Godley, Belhaven; Margaret Parker, Newton Grove; Ollie Putman, Anderson, S. C.; Betty Telford, Charlotte; and Ernestine Thomas, Winston-Salem.

Demos Let Us Down on C-R, Says NAACP

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The NAACP charged that Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D. Mont.) turned his back on the party's platform pledge, thus paving the way this week for the Senate's decision to extend the Civil Rights Commission for only two years.

The Democratic platform, adopted last July in Los Angeles, promised, "The new Democratic administration will broaden the scope and strengthen the powers of the present commission and make it permanent."

NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins wired President Kennedy pointing out "denial of the Democratic party's commitment to pro-

Fayetteville St. Shopping Center Formally Okayed

The City Council on Tuesday night okayed recommendation by the Planning and Zoning Commission to permit construction of Abe Greenberg's College Plaza Shopping Center.

The Zoning Board two weeks ago approved a request by Greenberg interests for rezoning of 7.3 acres at the end of Fayetteville Road after members of the Urban Renewal Commission and Durham Business and Professional Chain agreed on the reduced center.

Greenberg had originally asked for rezoning of 18 acres, but met with strong objection from the Chain and the redevelopment commission, who requested time to have a survey made to determine whether the Negro community in South Durham could support Greenberg's Center and the center proposed by the urban renewal people.

Walker Picked For Durham Zoning Body

WALKER

W. J. Walker, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Fidelity Mutual Insurance Company, was appointed to a 4-year term by the City Council to the City Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night at the Council's weekly meeting.

The appointment marked the first time a Negro has been selected to serve on the five-man commission.

As a member of the commission, Walker and other commission members are responsible for making decisions on zoning requests, recommending to the City Council. See WALKER, page 6-A

IN WARREN COUNTY

Pupils Strike

WARRENTON—Negro residents of Warren County continued their boycott this week in protest over facilities in a two-room frame school house.

Only six of 45 Negro pupils appeared at rural Snow Hill School this week where the boycott began last week after residents were refused consolidation with a larger school in Warrenton.

J. Rodger Peeler, superintendent of county schools, said it had not been determined how many of the Negro pupils were remaining away from school because of the boycott or how many because of a late tobacco harvest.

Peeler added that he did not know if the state's Compulsory School Attendance Law would be invoked to end the boycott.

Charles McLean, NAACP representative from Winston-Salem, reportedly attended a meeting with leaders of the movement Tuesday night.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

Integration Takes Place Calmly In Georgia and Dallas, Texas

Seven Little Rock High Schools were integrated quietly this week in contrast to rioting that developed when desegregation began at four years ago. Negroes were admitted for the first time to white schools in Ft. Lauderdale and Daytona Beach, Fla. Police guarded Little Rock and Florida schools and no crowds formed.

School integration spread to seven Richmond, Va. communities. Integration of four Atlanta schools, started last week, resumed calmly.

Schools in Dallas, Tex., were for the first time integrated this week. New Orleans schools opened a two-day registration period for the second year of integration which started this week.
