Education, Conservation Held Keys To Meeting America's Future Needs

Education and proper conservation methods will enable Americans to meet all crucial future problems in conservation of resources, an audience at the third general session of the fifteenth annual meeting of the North Carolina Resource-Use Conference at North Carolina College was told Thursday.

Dr. Joseph L. Fisher, president of Resources for the Future, Inc., Washington, D. C. and keynote speaker for the conference, asserted his confidence in the abilities of research, improved conservation methods, and education to meet the challenges of the years ahead.

Stating that North Carolina has long been concerned with conservation of resources, Fisher commented on the early leadership in the conservation movement of such persons as Dr. Hugh Bennett and Dr. Will Alexander and acknowledged the state's prominent role in the movement.

In assessing the demands of the future upon the nation's resources, he cited a projected population figure of 330 million people by the year 2,000, and speculated about the general status of the economy and such resources as water, iron ore, aluminum, fertilizer and seeds. Increases in production of these, plus improved management methods will eliminate much of the need for additional acreage imposed by the rapid growth of cities, which is already a phenomenon of the 20th century and will be more marked in the 21st century, he said.

"Our organization, Resources for the Future, does not foresee any critical shortages for the country in the future in a general sense," said, insisting that in the future people will handle resources better and will conserve more.

Three key elements of assurance in future conservation, he declared are (1) continuous research involving oil, minerals, hybrid productions, water, which underscores the need for educating scientists and technicians; (2) improvement of methods of conservation, which involves continuous examinations of conservation policies on all levels by business and all levels of government; and (3) education.

"No problem will be solved unless educated men and women

It is in the hands of educational institutions administrators, teachers, and students. Whenever we anticipate problems for the future, we must return to the concern for the young people who will have to meet these problems," he said.

During this session of the conference, Dr. Theodore R. Speigler, chairman of the North Carolina College division of Resource-Use Education and state chairman of the conference, presented conference plaques to the following persons: Miss Ethel Mae Lewis, supervisor, Craven County Schools, New Bern; Miss Mabel Jordan, classroom teacher, South Nash Elementary School, Spring Hill; Frederick D. Duncar, principal, Shankletown School, Concord; Dr. Alfonso Elder, president of North Carolina College, Durham and Norfolk Whitted, program director, Radio Station WSRG.

Receiving trophies for outstanding achievement in utilizing resources in the community to enrich instruction were teachers' groups from Chatham, Cabarrus, Franklinton, Person, Lee and Ganville counties.

Clay's Victory Makes Him Serious Challenger

LOS ANGELES — Cassius Marcellus Clay, the talkative and brash young heavyweight from Louisville, Ky. made a lot of half believers last week when he knocked out veteran Archie Moore in the fourth round of their fight, just as he had earlier predicted.

Young Clay, whose name sounds like one of the nobles of ancient Rome, hurt Archie in the third round and put him away in a little over a minute of the fourth.

Clay had bragged loudly and long before the fight that Moore would fall in the fourth. And he proved he knew his business when he did just that here Thursday night.

Moore fought the first two rounds from a crouch, but Clay reached him in the third with a series of hard lefts and rights which left the ancient ring warrior reeling at the bell.

In the fatal fourth, he knocked him down three times, each time for a count of eight. After the third knock down referee Tommy Hart halted the

The victory marked a giant step in the brief but soaring career of the young Louisville slugger who only turned pro two years ago after his victories in the light heavyweight division in the 1960 Olympics.

It made him a serious contender for the heavyweight title. For Moore, the defeat might have signalled the twilight of his long and incredible career. He was a picture of dejection as he fought back the tears in the dressing room after the fight.

Always a brash talker who was often given more credit for ability with his lips than his fists, Clay will now have to be taken seriously by match makers.

Heavyweight champion Sonny Liston and his advisor were at ringside. Earlier in an afternoon interview Liston had disparaged Clay's title hopes by saying he could take on both Moore and Clay at the same time, similar to the style in which wrestlers perform in tag team matches.

Clay, as brash as even after his victory, said in his dressing room he was ready for Liston, and added he thought Sonny would last eight rounds.

In fact, he said, "if it were left up to me, I would fight Liston right now."

Turning to his recent victim, Clay said he couldn't give himself too much credit for beating Moore. "After all, he is an old man, the 20 year old Kentuckian chimed.

Jackson Rumored For Miami Game

JACKSON, Miss. — Jackson State College officials last week said there was nothing official about rumors which reported that the Tigers had been invited to play in the Orange Blossom Classic.

The rumor reached large proportions here following the Tigers capture of the Southwest Athletic Conference.

Jackson accomplished this feat by defeating Texas Southern, 23-13 in a game Saturday night, Nov. 10 at Ladd Memorial stadium here. It was their second SWAC championship in a row.

With another conference title safely under their belt, the Tigers can finish a successful season by beating Tennessee State in their final game of the season.

Florida A. and M. University is host team in the Orange Blossom Classic, which annually pits two of the country's best Negro teams in the post season event scheduled for Miami in early December.

Lincoln Wins District Title

OXFORD — Lincoln High School, of Chapel Hill, old hands at winning state championships, set their sights on another after knocking off highly touted Mary Potter, 26-0, last road block in their way to the championship game.

Coach Huck Peerman, veteran Lincoln coach, turned his thoughts immediately after Friday night's victory here to the Tigers upcoming date on Wednesday with Anderson high, of Winston-Salem.

These two clubs will battle for the state 3-A championship at Chapel Hill on Wednesday night. Anderson won the right to compete for the title by winning the western division championship in 3-A competition.

Lincoln's victory over Mary Potter Friday night established the Tigers as the eastern division champion.

The Tigers displayed overall superiority in defeating a surprised Mary Potter team. The proud Rams, coach by Fred McNeill, had entered the contest with a 7-1.1 mark and with a record of not having been scored upon at home all season.

Lincoln quickly went to work and dissipated the Rams' record and title hopes.

Livingstone Quint Faces 22 Opponents

SALISBURY — The Livingstone College basketball team is readying plans for a 22 game schedule for its first hardwood season in the CIAA, and Coach "Pop" Warner says that nearly four weeks of drills indicate that the Bears may be ready for their opening game with Norfolk State College at Salisbury on December 1st.

Fourteen games against Conference foes headline the 1962-63 schedule with eight games against non-conference foes added to round out a 22 game season for the hardwood quint. Robert Wiley, senior from East Spencer and Larry Albert, senior from Charlotte, two veteran performers will lead an inexperienced squad of talented players for Coach Warner.
