Vo-Ag Teachers Attend Annual Confab at A&T

GREENSBORO. — A group of agriculture teachers was told last week at A & T College that the continued decline in farm population will not reduce the need for instruction in vocational agriculture. The speaker was Dr. A. R. Edwards, deputy assistant secretary of agriculture, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. He was delivering the keynote address on Tuesday afternoon, July 7, at the opening session of the annual Conference of North Carolina Teachers of Agriculture held at the College.

"Far from it," he said, "the farmer of the future will need to be better trained than ever." He said the problems affecting the farm population, including: declining employment opportunities and underemployment migration of rural people to the cities, and economic, technological, and social pressures, which are pushing workers out of agriculture, give three major implications which will require changes in the approach of vocational agriculture. He listed these implications: (1) Agriculture is so complicated these days that the one-out-of-eleven-who is going to remain as a successful, full time, farmer needs far better educational preparation than farmers have ever had before, (2) vocational education must have the broader goal of training the substantial majority of rural young people who will not be able to enter farming or farm-related occupations at all, "Vocational agricultural training, alone," he said, "is not enough, today, and (3) the young people who are to remain in rural communities must be trained well in rural leadership.

H. L. Triggs a member of the North Carolina State Board of Public Instruction, Raleigh, who addressed the final session on Friday, brought out a similar point. He told the group that with increased production and a decline in the number of workers now required on the farm, one would think that farming is going out of style. "There will always be a need for farmers, and better farmers," he said, "and you must be sure that those who are competent should not run from what many consider a dying industry. The new trend in agriculture requires a higher degree of competency."

Two other speakers also hit upon the same points by telling the teachers, "The students we teach are not statistics... they are people." Charles F. Carroll, superintendent, N. C. Department of Public Instruction, emphasized the point when he told the teachers that one of the gravest domestic problems which now faces the nation is that of finding enough jobs for our youth who are moving into the labor market at an ever increasing rate. A. G. Bufard, State supervisor of Vocational Agricultural Education, touched on the same note when he said that reevaluation of the new plans and innovations which are brought to the Vo-Ag program, the teacher must remember that the program must be flexible enough to meet the needs of the students.

"We may design new patterns of agricultural education; we may define our objectives, yes, redirect our resources, yet, if we lose sight of the individual for whom we are planning the educational program, we may fail in the end to accomplish a real objective of education." Dr. Carroll told the audience that he came to the meeting with two basic thoughts in mind, the critical situation which now faces America in finding employment for the increasing thousands of people, particularly young people, now becoming available for jobs which do not exist and, secondly, of preparing youth so that they may engage in employment. The dangers of prejudgment of students by teachers were pointed out by two other speakers. H. G. Beard, associate director, Division of Vocational Education, State Department of Public Instruction, warned the group, "Let us never place a student in a 'straight-jacket' with fixed opinions on how far he might go. That is dangerous and uncertain. Let us give them all a healthy learning opportunity. Let us take them from where they are and give them opportunity to grow and grow."

He issued more advice. "Let us look at students as human beings, persons who can learn for all deserve the opportunity." He said the tendency, today to place all students in special categories, slow learners and the gifted, and deciding in advance on those who will continue and not continue in education, too often "pigeon hole" some who have great talent. "We should allow them all free range for fullest development," he added.

Dr. Arthur F. Jackson, director of guidance at A & T College who spoke on the subject, "The Place of Guidance in the New Era in Agricultural Education," also had comments along much the same line. "Too many teachers," he said, "decide the ability or the potential of a student on a single test. This is not fair to the student or the teachers," he added. Dr. Jackson stated that he always finds amusing the statement, "The test says... and, countered, "I have given many, many tests, but none has never ever spoken to me. True, we get lots of information from these tests, but they are not always infallible."

He told the group that tests, either educational or subject matter, should be given only for one purpose and that is to help the students, and, "if it does not accomplish that purpose, it has no real meaning." The teachers were also warned, "Negroes should not expect to be employed in jobs for which they cannot qualify, but preferential consideration should be extended to them in their preparation for such, in view of the long years of discriminatory practices suffered and of the demands of the future."

The speaker was Dr. Samuel E. Duncan, president of Livingstone College, Salisbury, and president-elect of the North Carolina Teachers Association. He was delivering the dinner message at the annual Awards Banquet on Thursday evening. He explained to the group that in times of war, the United States, through the cooperation of business, industry and labor trained and produced quickly the manpower needed to meet national emergencies. "An emergency exists today," he said that demands action in the interest of Americans, deprived, who are eager to contribute their share to the great on-20 of American Democracy." Dr. Duncan was introduced by W. T. Johnson, Jr., district su-

Vets to Benefit From 2 New Bills

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Two bills recently signed into law by President Johnson will benefit veterans who hold National Service Life Insurance policies, the Veterans Administration announced recently. More than 5 1/2 million World War II and Korean Conflict veterans who hold National Service Life Insurance policies will benefit from an extension of premium waiver provisions. At present the law provides for the waiver of premiums if the insured becomes totally disabled before his 60th birthday. This provision will be automatically included in all policies. The new law takes effect January 1, 1965.

The second law authorizes the granting of a new total disability income provision which provides a monthly income of $10 for each $1,000 of insurance if the insured becomes totally disabled before reaching his 65th birthday. The present law, the VA explains, has an income provision if the disability occurs before the insured's 60th birthday. Service-disabled veterans holding "RI" insurance policies will not be eligible for this new total disability income provision. Those who are eligible must be in good health. They must file an application and must pay an additional premium. VA officials pointed out that application forms for the disability riders will be available this fall. GI policyholders affected will be advised. There will be no need to write the VA, they said.

Several persons were cited at the dinner session. R. J. Fitzgerald, Nashville, and S. C. Smith, Lenoir, and J. C. McLaughlin, professor of rural sociology at A & T College were cited with plaques and certificates upon their retirement. Presented 25-year service awards were: Richard A. Broadnax, Williamston; J. B. Brown, Tabor City; R. A. Lewis, Oxford; M. L. Campbell, Kings Mountain; J. L. Faulcon, Ahoskie; and R. K. Wright, Catawba. Among those cited for service in the program in excess of 30 years were: Johnson, M. K. Woodson, Concord; Isaac Rodgers, Battleboro; J. J. Mitchell, Elizabeth City; and J. L. Moffitt, Durham.
