PUPIL FIGHTING SHUTS CLEVELAND HIGH SCHOOL
CLEVELAND, Ohio—Police last week broke up fighting between Negro and white students which closed one of the city's largest high schools.

Several small fights broke out as students arrived at the racially tense school. Upward to a hundred policemen called by an emergency alert were able to prevent any serious violence.

Nobody was hurt in the fighting apparently stemmed from an attack by six Negro boys on six white students last Friday night. The boys said they were assaulted when they walked by a YMCA a Negro group had rented for a dance.

No man can go completely to the dogs without a good deal of determination.

NCC Professor Awarded Post-Doctoral Grant

Dr. Marjorie Lee Browne, professor of mathematics and chairman of the Department of Mathematics at North Carolina College, has been awarded a National Science Foundation science faculty fellowship for studying during the 1965-66 school year.

This is the third postdoctoral fellowship received by the NCC mathematician. In 1952-53 she was a Ford fellow at Cambridge University, Cambridge, England. In 1958-59 she studied as a National Science Foundation fellow at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Provisions of the 1965-66 grant include the matching of her salary at NCC, round trip travel, funds for travel to professional meetings, and a cost-of-education allowance which covers all tuition and assessed fees at the university of her choice.

What Other Editors Are Saying...

Civil rights demonstrators have been singing, "We Shall Overcome" whenever and wherever protest marches and meetings were held during the last five years. At first there were only small groups who knew and chanted the slow-moving Freedom song.

Then as the social revolution picked up speed and support, "We Shall Overcome" became the theme song of larger and larger groups. Now it is sung with fervor at almost every gathering where citizens are fighting for their rights.

Monday night, the hearts of men of good-will everywhere were touched when President Lyndon Baines Johnson incorporated the words "We Shall Overcome" in the stirring address to Congress and to the nation calling upon America to end the discrimination and segregation which he said Negroes have suffered for 100 years.

In a compelling speech in which he made it clear to the South and the nation that he means business, President Johnson asked Congress to pass without delay a broad voting rights bill which will prevent places like Selma from denying citizens the right to vote simply because of the color of their skin.

He urged Congress to work nights, Sundays and week-ends if necessary to pass a bill which will knock out the ingenious methods devised by southern officials to keep Negroes from passing so-called "literacy" tests. And the President said that if southern officials refuse to register Negroes, officials of the federal government will do so. President Johnson also gave his blessing to street demonstrations as long as they are carried on in a peaceful manner.

It was gratifying to hear the President of the United States throw the entire weight of the federal government behind the civil rights movement. The speech has been acclaimed everywhere as the strongest speech on human rights ever made by any President.

Those who have said that President Johnson was slow in taking a stand on the Selma situation must have the feeling now that what the chief executive said Monday night was "worth waiting for."

The American people must now call upon the Congress to pass the voting rights bill without delay. There is no need to drag through countless months of hearings. If our Congressmen and Senators will fall in line behind our President, surely in short order "we shall overcome."
