"Crucifixion" Unveiled At St. Augustine's College

The "Crucifixion," a painting done by Howard Burchette, Saint Augustine's art professor, was unveiled Sunday, March 27, in the College Chapel during the regular service at 11 o'clock a.m.

It is significant that this painting was unveiled during Lent. This painting, according to Mr. Burchette, is one that he has always wanted to paint, using the color scheme that would depict an atmosphere of Christ.

Specific aspects to be denoted about this painting are the value scales of the hues going from dark to light denoting the gaiety of heaven and the polychromatic value. The art professor is noted for having done other religious paintings among which are "Daniel in the Lion's Den" located in Brooklyn and "Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane" in Henderson.
