New Book on C-R Killings Now Available

NEW YORK—It was not until the killing of James Reeb, the minister from Boston, that the white public began to be concerned about civil rights murders.

For example, the death of Jimmy Lee Jackson, Alabama logger shot by a state trooper, created no more than a ripple in the national consciousness—there was not wave of protest when the Rev. George W. Lee was killed in Belzoni, Mississippi—the slaying of Medgar Evers and the Birmingham children reached and touched the country's conscience only momentarily.

So says Reverend Jack Mendelsohn, pastor of the Arlington Street Unitarian Church in Boston, in a book titled "The Martyrs—16 Who Gave Their Lives for Racial Justice."

The sixteen "martyrs" viewed here include George W. Lee, Negro Baptist minister; William Moore, white postman killed while delivering a letter of protest to Governor Wallace; Viola Liuzzo, Detroit housewife - mother killed in Selma, Ala.; Andrew Goodman, Michael Schwerner, James Chaney, three CORE members kidnapped and murdered in Mississippi; James Reeb, white "family man," whose death was the first to cause a major impact.

The author visited the families of these sixteen, obtaining access to correspondence, private diaries and unpublished interviews. In some cases, he recorded eye-witness accounts of the actual circumstances of the murders.

"Until now, some of the racial killings described here have gone virtually unreported," he states. "As the saying goes, 'everybody knows' who killed many of these about whom I write. The townspeople and local police know. The FBI knows. Yet, in some instances, there have been no indictments, nor even hearings for that matter. In others, there have been court trials of varying degrees of seriousness, ending either in outright acquittal or hung juries."

"Unspeakable crimes, when they reach us through the Durham Boy Attends NYC Convention In St. Louis, Mo.

David Best, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Best, 1408 South St., was one of three outstanding enrollees in the Neighborhood Youth Corps sent from North Carolina to a national NYC convention in St. Louis, Missouri, May 24.

Young Best was accompanied to the convention by W. R. Pursell and James Wiggins, director and associate director respectively of Durham's Neighborhood Youth Corps.

The convention, the theme, "Neighborhood Youth Corps—Prescription for Change," was carried out through meetings and discussions. Leisure activities for the participants included attendance at a major league baseball game.

prisms of mass communication, can still remain impersonal," the author says. "This book is written as an act of remembrance, an attempt to make as personal as possible the kinds of lives that have been sacrificed."
