Personally Yours
... answers questions about Junior Miss etiquette, grooming and interests.

Q. My sister is getting married this summer. The preparations are so exciting! But I don't know many people on the guest list and all our relatives are older than I. Would it be all right to ask one or two of my friends to the wedding?
A. This is your sister's day! And she'll want it to be perfect! You're probably unnecessarily concerned — because you'll find yourself just as excited about the wedding and reception as you are about the plans. After all, the groom might have some cousins your age! If you still think it's a real problem, talk it over with your sister and mother, then accept their decision gracefully. For this big day, your sister should have the Last Word!
Q. I'm going to be a playground supervisor this summer. I plan to be a teacher when I finish school so I'm really looking forward to it. The park provides some supplies, but I'd like to add my own projects. Do you have any low cost ideas?
A. You can use everyday household items to entertain your "students." Cardboard cores from Delsey bathroom tissue, cut into a spiral and painted brightly, make pretty bracelets for tiny wrists. Shoe boxes, decorated on the inside with pictures from magazines and painted black on the outside, make peep shows. Just add a big hole in the lid to let light in and a small hole in one end for peeping. Egg cartons are perfect containers for rock collections. Plastic milk cartons with the tops cut off make waterproof flower pots. The youngsters can bring supplies like these from home too. Your ideas will spark their imaginations!

Q. My photograph collection is getting out of hand. I have pictures in drawers, on shelves, on my desk, and hidden away in nooks and crannies — and the collection's getting bigger. I can never find the pictures I want. What should I do?
A. Sounds like you need an expandable photo album, divided into sections to help organize pictures. You'll need colored construction paper, cardboard and Marvalon adhesive covering. Decorate the cardboard with Marvalon to make album covers and sectional dividers, and use construction paper for pages. Punch holes in pages and dividers, tie a ribbon through them and your album is ready. Add more pages or sections as the collection grows.
