Dr. Fulbright Named NCC Un'grad Dean

Dr. Stewart B. Fulbright, professor of commerce at North Carolina College, has been appointed dean of the college's Undergraduate School effective September 1.

The announcement was made Wednesday by William Jones, chairman of the institution's Interim Committee, which is in charge of administration of the college until a president is selected.

Speaking for the committee, Jones said that everyone felt the selection of Fulbright in this capacity insured the continued high quality of performance exemplified by the former undergraduate dean, Dr. Joseph A. Pittman. He added that the vacant deanship resulted from Pittman's request that the committee permit him to return to his former position as professor of education to pursue his interests in teaching and statistical research. Pittman assumed the post in September of 1964.

Fulbright, who has been at NCC continuously since 1947, holds the A.B. degree from Lincoln University (Mo.), the M.B.A. from the University of Chicago, and the Ph.D. from The Ohio State University. He pursued post-doctoral studies on a Danforth fellowship in 1962 at the University of Pennsylvania.

Among his rich experiences are teaching duties which included undergraduate and graduate classes in insurance, real estate marketing and other areas of business administration. He has performed summer work with the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co. in microfilming and agency departments. In the summer of 1963, he was a social administration specialist with the U.S. Unemployment Insurance Service.

Dr. Fulbright holds membership in the Southern Marketing Association, American Risk and Insurance Association, National Business Teachers Association, North Carolina Teachers Association, American Association of University Professors, Phi Delta Kappa, Delta Pi Epsilon, and Kappa Alpha Psi.

As a captain in World War II, he was a pilot with the 477 Bombardment Group. Now on inactive duty with the Air Force Reserve, he is married and the father of two children—a daughter, Gina, 13, and a son, James, 10.

NEW YORK — Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, called for sanctions against South Africa, Rhodesia and the Portuguese colonies after the International Court of Justice dismissed a complaint filed by the Governments of Ethiopia and Liberia challenging the racist policies instituted by South Africa in the mandated territory of South West Africa.

The Court, the highest judicial agency of the United Nations, announced its verdict at The Hague, Holland, on July 18. By split vote, 8 to 7, the Court dismissed the complaint on the technical ground that neither Liberia nor Ethiopia had a valid legal interest in the case. The United States representative on the Court, Justice P. C. Jessup, voted with the minority.

The suit, filed six years ago, charged that South Africa, by introducing its own apartheid policies in South West Africa, had violated requirements of the League of Nations' mandate under which it ruled the territory in that it had failed to promote the welfare of the inhabitants of the country.

The full text of Wilkins' statement, issued July 19, follows: The failure of the International Court of Justice to take action against South Africa's racist regime in the mandated territory of South West Africa cannot but have a dismaying impact upon Africans and their descendants in the United States and throughout the world. That the Court should subordinate justice to a technicality does not enhance its prestige among the disadvantaged peoples of the world.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is gratified that the American representative on the Court voted with the minority to sustain charges filed by Ethiopia and Liberia. However, See EMBARGO 2A
