NCC Sets Teacher Exams Dates

Dates for the National Teacher Examinations to be administered at North Carolina College in 1967 have been announced by Educational Testing Service.

The tests, required by several states including North Carolina for teacher certification, will be given at NCC on January 7, 1967, March 18, 1967, and July 1, 1967. The tests will also be given on October 7, 1967, at other testing centers.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many school districts as a factor in the selection of new teachers and are required in several states. Some colleges also require the test of all seniors planning to teach.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations, testing professional preparations and general knowledge, and one of 13 Teaching Area Examinations measuring mastery of specific subjects.

Persons planning to teach should seek advice from the school system in which they plan to teach, or from the Department of Education at N. C. College, to determine which tests to take.

A bulletin of information containing a list of test centers and information about the examinations is available from the college, from school personnel departments and from the National Teacher Examinations, Box 911, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J. 08540.

Dr. F. G. Shipman, chairman of the Department of Education, is in charge of the administration of the examinations at North Carolina College.

The Truth About Arthritis

Third of four articles

For some unknown reason, more women than men suffer from arthritis.

In its booklet on rheumatoid arthritis, The Arthritis Foundation says: "It is seen more often in women than men. It is most likely to strike people from 20 to 50 years, but can occur at any age. Children sometimes suffer from rheumatoid arthritis, either in a rather mild form or in a serious and fast-developing form sometimes called Still's disease."

Most often children develop the disease before the age of seven; but occasionally it occurs during the first year. This so-called juvenile arthritis may last into adult life. Although rheumatoid arthritis is fatal to few children, it is a potential danger to internal organs and eyes, and it may retard normal growth and development during adolescence.

As in adult cases, juvenile rheumatoid arthritis can, and should, be treated under a physician's supervision with anti-inflammatory drugs as well as physical therapy.

Arthritis are often victimized by "quacks" who sell worthless "cures" for high prices. Because of their pain, arthritis will try almost anything, often disregarding the doctor's advice. Says The Arthritis Foundation:

"Aspirin is so commonly used that some people feel it is nothing special to take for a serious disease. . . . Because the drug is so widely and easily available, because so many people take it for headache and the common cold, and because it can be bought without a prescription, it has been downgraded in people's minds. The fact is that aspirin is one of the most useful drugs ever devised, and that it has a very special and helpful effect in rheumatoid arthritis."

"In fact, aspirin as we know it today was actually developed specifically for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. In addition to relieving pain, it tends to reduce joint inflammation."

Billy Graham to Address Council of Churches

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—Evangelist Billy Graham will address a luncheon meeting of the National Council of Churches' Seventh General Assembly, at the Fontainebleau Hotel here Dec. 4-7, it was announced by NCC general secretary Dr. R. H. Edwin Espy.

The internationally known Dr. Graham will speak to a "Fellowship Luncheon" for voting representatives of the Assembly and members of the general public at 12:45 P.M. Tuesday, Dec. 6, in the Fontaine Room of Hotel Fontainebleau. His topic, "How the World May Know," is based on the theme of the triennial meeting: "That the World May Know," from John 17:23 (RSV).

"We hope that those who live in the Miami area will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear Dr. Graham during the National Council of Churches' largest and most significant regular gathering," Dr. Espy said.

Presiding at the Graham luncheon will be Mrs. Norman Vincent Peete, wife of the minister and well-known author, and also a member of the National Council's general board.

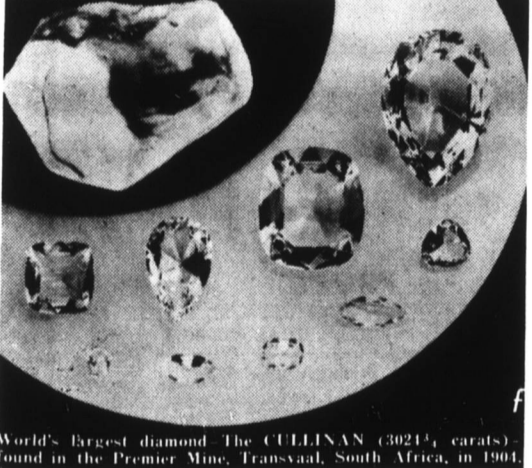

The General Assembly—often called the "triennial town meeting of the nation's churches"—will bring an estimated 3,000 church leaders to Miami Beach for six days of business sessions which will affect the future course of the cooperative church movement in America.

Church leaders will consider pressing issues which face the church today: unity, evangelism, and the moral implications of a host of problems arising from urban renewal, science and technology, sex, marriage and family life, race relations, international affairs, poverty, and revolution.

The stone as found

World's largest diamond The CULLINAN (3024 1/2 carats) found in the Premier Mine, Transvaal, South Africa, in 1904.

"C" is for Centennial

NEW YORK (CFN)—The boy was like most boys then and now. He was barefoot and clad in patched, shabby coveralls. But he could turn a stick into a sword! And for him, the shallow, rocky-bedded river that ran through the dusty community of Hopetown, South Africa became a raging torrent plunging toward the falls: the legendary falls the trekkers had seen a thousand miles beyond the Veld.

The boy invented adventures every step of his gambling way that day a hundred years ago. And when he stooped to pick up a stone he could skitter down the road, he began an adventure beyond his wildest dreams. An adventure that to this day widens the eye of the staunchest businessmen, and sends a queen's blood rushing through her royal veins like any schoolgirl.

For that was no skittering stone the boy found. It was a funny stone, an "odd'un." All dark and dull, yet glittery too and full of funny lights and even queer to the touch. No, not a stone for skittering. The boy had found a stone for starting land rushes, for creating empires. A stone to cut—if you can find the way to do it—and to reshape into brilliant stars you hold in your hand, or string on platinum and hang about a lady's white shoulders.

Little did that boy—like most boys then and now—realize that he had found the first diamond in the history of South Africa. And what began as a plaything became a mighty industry, a hundred million dreams for lovers to build upon, and the symbol of legend and luxury throughout the world.

In this centennial year, when we celebrate that boy's discovery, if we brought him forward to say a word or two, he would probably, like most boys then and now, say, "Oh sir, I didn't mean to do it!"

(Here is the many-faceted world of diamonds; brilliant, mysterious, always fascinating!)

North Carolina Mutual Life Ins. Company Holds Three-Day School Here for Its Cashiers

A three-day school for North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company Cashiers and Assistant Cashiers was held here recently at the home office of the company. In addition to regular seminars and workshops, an address by a district manager was delivered, and a formal banquet held.

Seventy-four Cashiers and Assistant Cashiers from nine states and the District of Columbia were enrolled.

The states represented were Alabama, California, Georgia, Maryland, No. Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia.

The theme of the school was "U. F. O." (Uniform Field Offices which spelled out the objectives: (1) improved service through error reduction and (2) increased efficiency through procedural uniformity.

Faculty members were L. B. Frasier, agency director of the company who served as Dean of the School; William A. Clement, CLU, vice president-Field Operations; Mrs. Natalie F. Holmes, chief auditor; and R. C. W. Perry, controller. Others who participated in the school with the faculty were R. Kelly Bryant, Jr., assistant secretary; Mrs. Stella Cleland, assistant to the President; Thad B. Gaillard, associate agency director; Dossie N. Jones, manager of the New Business Division; Mrs. Helen R. Jones, manager of the Policy Services Division;

Felix Miller, auditor; Mrs. Mary P. Mitchell, field clerical supervisor; Gordon Perry, auditor; R. Delacy Peters, assistant to the agency director; Clarence Phillips, field clerical supervisor; and Mrs. Alma H. Wade, director-Advertising and Public Relations.

An outstanding feature of the school was an address by A. J. H. Clement, Jr., manager of the company's North Philadelphia District. Mr. Clement's subject was "The Romantic and Exciting World of the Cashier."

He charged the group to have imagination on the job likening it to a "service station" for policyholders. He said further that a cashier can make the job exciting as he serves the company and the community at large.

President Asa T. Spaulding brought greetings and challenged the Cashiers and Assistant Cashiers with the question, "Can You Meet This Competitive Market?" He stated that the only way to answer this challenge is to be prepared in knowledge and skills with proper attitudes.

A highlight of the school was the banquet held on Tuesday evening in the Home Office cafeteria with Mrs. Asa T. Spaulding, the wife of President Spaulding, as the principal speaker. Her subject was "On Being a Woman." She told the group that "a woman of action with a dedicated purpose can achieve to a more productive tomorrow."

Class officers elected by the group were Mrs. Virginia Stepteau, Charlotte District, president; Mrs. Frances T. Petteway, Goldsboro District, secretary; Mrs. Vivienne H. Bowman, Norfolk District, treasurer; and Miss Mabel L. Spratley, West Philadelphia District high sheriff.
