 due to the apparent lethargy, apathy and uncncem of the current Negro leaders in North Carolina.
 The time is "now" for such leaders as the following to come together and plan a strategy which will point the way and give guidance for a united attack upon all of the reactionary forces in North Carolina that are designed to keep Negroes in the category of second-class citizens: The President and Executive Secretary of the Baptist-State Convention, the Bishops and Presiding Elders of the Methodist Church, and other leaders of the State Religious denominations; the Editors of the Negro Newspapers, the President and Executive Secretary of the North Carolina Negro Teachers' Association, the President of the State NAACP, the president of the Negro Bar Association, the Negro Voters League, the President of the various Women's Organizations and the Presidents of the State Youth Organizations.
 The writer will make a personal contribution of one hundred (100.00) dollars to assist in covering the cost of such a proposal as outlined above.

 of the law school.
 Shreve also presented William Jones, chairman of the interim committee, who made the group's major presentation, which included increases for capital improvements and current operations as well as a plea for continuation of the law school.
 In the capital improvement request, which totaled $2,142,000, were three projects rejected by the Advisory Budget Commission in its recommendations to Gov. Dan K. Moore and the General Assembly. These were a communications building costing $1,197,000, renovation of the college's Fine Arts Building at a cost of $195,000, and a health science building for $750,000.
 Making his plea for continuation of the NCC Law School, Jones stated that his wish was for a law school which will provide legal education for all citizens, regardless of race, from low income groups. He told the committee that at the state's request in 1939, and by legislative enactment, the facility was established.
 "No other state institution has been definitely committed to the important task of providing that young men and women who were disadvantaged can be lifted high enough to produce effective lawyers. In view of the number of Negro and white youths from poor families in North Carolina, this was, and is still, an important service to be rendered youths of both races."

Jones added that now that higher education is no longer threatened by desegregation, Negroes and whites should not be forced by any state arrangement to pretend that the circumstances which created the challenge accepted by NCC in 1939 will go away if they are simply ignored. "On the contrary," he said, "to ignore the educational needs and aspirations of youths, Negro and white, who are poor and other-wise disadvantaged through no fault of their own is to reopen a highly sensitive lesion in race relations that fair-minded citizens of both races have labored long to heal."

License Tag Bill to Get More Study

Legislation to provide North Carolina motorists with special personalized license tags for an additional fee was sent to a House subcommittee for further study Wednesday.
 The action was taken by the House Roads Committee following a hearing on the measure. Funds derived from the extra fee for the specialized tags would be used to support a highway beautification commission and to provide additional funds for the North Carolina Travel Council.
 The added expense of the tags would be about $2. The bill proposes that the beautification commission be composed of 11 members. Six would be appointed by the North Carolina Garden Clubs' executive committee and five by the Governor.
 The proposed legislation would bring in an estimated $1 million a year.
 State Highway Chairman Joe Hunt said he was opposed to an advisory group on highway beautification. He explained that his department has professional people and that friction might result if the department did not follow the recommendations of the advisors.
 "I would rather pick out who I want to advise me," Hunt said. The committee delayed action on a bill to require mufflers and exhaust stacks on all diesel-powered trucks in North Carolina.
 A favorable report was given to a bill to require the Highway Department to record project maps in the counties where the work would be done.

Mimi was one of the first three Negro students enrolled at the Woman's College. She says: "I've enjoyed Duke very much." Regarding her associations with fellow students, she replied: "It'll always feel very close to some of the girls I've met here."

Immediate plans other than graduate studies, include marriage. Her hobbies are playing the piano, trumpet, reading, and sports.

Odel R. Reuben, Mimi's father, is president of Morris College in Sumter and her mother is a faculty member there.

Regarding her election as May Queen at Duke, Mimi said: "I'm still trying to adjust to it. I've been wandering around in a haze of disbelief and excitement."

Nick's Son Is Called Elizabeth

DURHAM — Rep. Nick Galifianakis (D-NC) may be the only congressman with a son named Elizabeth—temporarily.

Galifianakis' first son was born to his wife, Louise, in Watts Hospital at 4 a.m. Wednesday.

Already the parents of two daughters, Galifianakis said they were resigned to a third and had named the unborn child Elizabeth.

"We are stuck with it and haven't got around to changing it yet," Galifianakis laughed. "We haven't agreed on a name yet. We are going to hold a caucus with him and pick a name."

Galifianakis said he had trouble finding out what sex the child was.

"The first nurse I saw said 'I told you it was going to be a girl.' The second nurse said 'I don't know what it is.' The doctor said 'ask your wife.' I said to my wife 'That's a beautiful child, what is it?' She said 'It's a stinking little girl.'"

Choosing a Cat

Time was when a cat was a cat, but the day of the pedigree has dawned. Today there are many fancy breeds of cats to choose from and, for the person about to purchase a cat, each deserves consideration.
 The pedigree cats fall into two general classes, the short-haired and long-haired, says the Purina Pet Care Center.
 Most popular of the short-haired cats are the Siamese. There are several varieties, the Seal Point, Chocolate Point, Lilac Point and others which have pale bodies and contrasting "points"—the tail, ears, legs and a mask about the face. Affectionate and conversational, the Siamese is given to making a wide variety of sounds to express his emotions. If you want a quiet cat, think twice about getting a Siamese.
 As striking a cat as any is the Burmese, with his luxurious brown sable coat and deep gold eyes. Burmese are exceptionally affectionate pets, and much less vocal than the Siamese. They are adept at learning tricks and enthrall for retrieving objects.
 The Manx needs little introduction. This cat, named for his original home, The Isle of Man, has no tail and something of a hopping gait. He is a friendly cat—and a sure-fire conversation piece.
 Bearing the strongest resemblance of all breeds to the ancient, sacred cat of Egypt is the Abyssinian. His russet coat is ticked with black. Eye color may be green, hazel or gold. He is a proud cat and, appropriately, an expensive purchase. Costs vary so widely.
 The long-haired cats are usually called Persians. They come in a wide variety of colors. Large round heads, wide eyes and small ears characterize the breed.
 If you are planning to buy a cat, examine members of each of these deservedly famous breeds.
