PRIMARY END OF MARRIAGE

"The truth is that marriage, as a natural institution, is not ordered by the will of the Creator towards personal perfection of the husband and wife as its primary end, but to the procreation and education of a new life [the procreation and education of the child as a human person]. The other ends of marriage, although part of nature's plan, are not of the same importance as the first. Still less are they superior. On the contrary, they are essentially subordinate to it. This principle holds good for all marriages, even if they are unfruitful."

Pope Pius XII, Catholic Digest—April.
