Broncos May Don New Look Second Half of Cage Season

FAYETTEVILLE — Fayetteville State College' cage coach Frank P. Robinson, welcomes the holiday break and he plans to utilize the extra time to reflect on the Broncos' unimpressive start in the 1967-68 Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association cage race.

Uppermost in Coach Robinson's mind is how he can channel the Broncos' scoring power into a winning combination. Fayetteville boasts one of the loop's highest scoring machines, averaging more than 83-points per contest. However, the FSC defense has been vulnerable in eight games, allowing opponents a 99.8 mark.

Fayetteville has been getting steady performances from its starters — Roy McNeill, Oscar Phillips, Lonnie Smith, Oliver Bell and Ronald Pettway, but the lack of a big man has been detrimental. McNeill and Phillips have been scoring in double figures consistently and Bell and Pettway are hovering around the charm mark.

Despite the lack of height, the Broncos have been averaging more than 70-field goal attempts per contest. The number is remarkable but the percentage leaves a lot to be desired. Of course when a team is down, they resort to a lot of desperation shots and this has contributed to the relatively low shooting percentage.

When the Broncos resume their basketball was January 4 against Voorhees College, fans may be in for a revamped offensive attack. Coach Robinson has been toying with the idea of discipline basketball and may install the system in lieu of the rapid fire offense.

The brilliant play of freshmen Oliver Bell (6-5) and Ronald Pettway (6-1) has impressed sideline observers. Bell is the Broncos' big man and a capable rebounder. Pettway plays in the backcourt and is rapidly gaining the confidence of his peers. Bell's big night was against Barber Scotia. He scored 30-points in a losing cause. Pettway has displayed unusual poise for a first year man and with a little more experience could be a bright prospect.

Fayetteville's lone win came

Ford Foundation Appoints Nat'l Program Officer

NEW YORK—The Ford Foundation today announced the appointment of Christopher F. Edley as program officer in charge of the Government and Law section of its National Affairs Division.

In his new post, Mr. Edley will be particularly concerned with the Foundation's efforts to improve the administration of civil and criminal justice, to combat crime and delinquency, and to help solve key problems of government at the national and regional level. Previously, Mr. Edley was a program officer in the Social Development section of the National Affairs Division, where his work focused on problems of race relations and included efforts to strengthen key organizations and civic and economic self-help groups.

Before joining the Foundation in 1963, Mr. Edley served for two years with the Federal Housing over Livingstone College and they have dropped contests to Barber Scotia (twice) Winston-Salem State, A&T State University, North Carolina College, Elizabeth City State, and Saint Augustine's College.

Scribes tap Hank Aaron Braves MVP

ATLANTA — Slugging Hank Aaron was voted the most valuable of the Atlanta Braves during the past season by the Atlanta Baseball Writers Association today.

Aaron, who has played with the National Baseball League Braves all of his 14 years in the majors, led the league in home runs, batting average, and total bases last season.

THE RIGHTFIELDER is ninth on the all-time major league home-run list with 39 last season, and 461 in his career. He had a slugging average last season of .573, and racked up 344 total bases.

The Mobile, (Ala.) native has played in every All-Star game since 1955, and holds all-time Braves records in ten categories, including grand slam home runs, doubles, and extra base hits.

BALTIMORE — Pimlico and quiniela Quiniela wagering, developed in Latin America and now highly popular in the United States, again will be available at the Jan. 2 Feb. 10 Pimlico meeting. The quiniela amounts to a one-race daily double, the bettor winning if his selections finish either one-two or two-one.

Moore passes buck on Klan action

RALEIGH, N.C.—Gov. Dan K. Moore last week shifted the burden of action against the Ku Klux Klan to the state's district solicitors.

A report by the House Un-American Activities Committee had noted the state could move against the Klan under a law prohibiting sedition political societies.

Gov. Moore's stand against the Klan is well-known, a spokesman said, "but legal action is not up to him."

The HUAC report also raised suspicions that J. Robert Jones, grand dragon of the state Klan filed false income tax reports in 1964 and 1965. A state government source said action on this score must come from the State Revenue Department.

THE REPORT estimated that almost exactly half of the United Klans of America, the membership of the United Klans of America, the major group, is North Carolina.

When told of this, Jones said, "that's pretty good. It must be because of my excellent leadership."
