Decision By Appeals Court Jolts Powell

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that former Rep. Adam Clayton Powell cannot challenge his ouster in the federal courts.

The decision, upholding a district court ruling, was unanimous and amounted to another setback for the beleaguered Harlem Democrat.

Powell was excluded from the 90th Congress March 1, 1967, by vote of his former colleagues. His congressional seat has remained vacant pending his effort to overthrow the action. The appeals court said Wednesday it could not help him.

While ruling that the 59-year-old Powell could not ask the courts to change an action taken by the legislative branch, the appeals panel in effect conceded that the House may have erred in refusing to seat him.

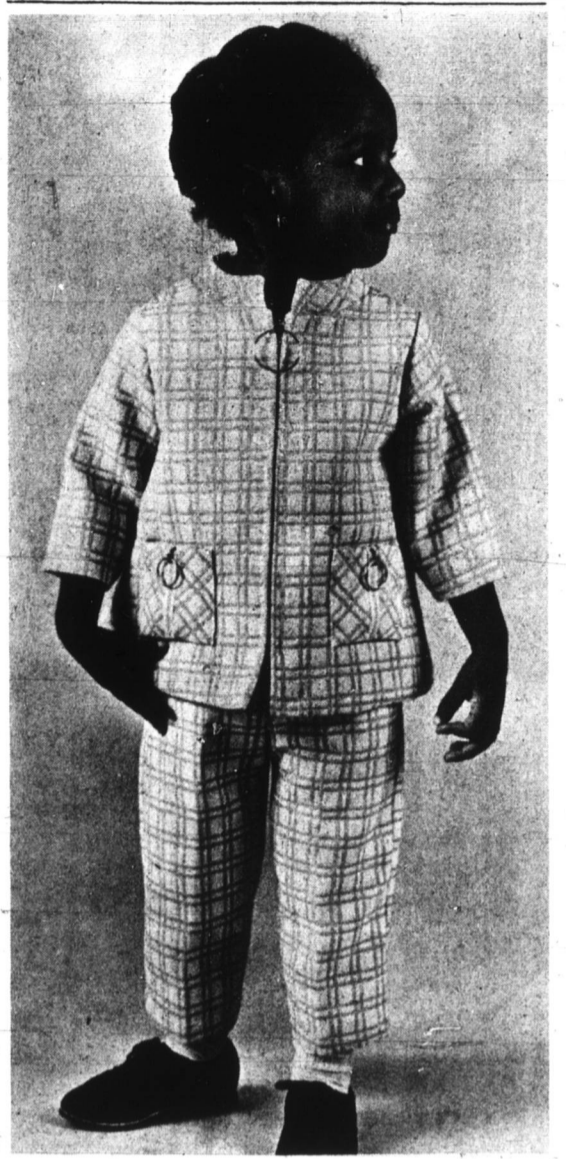

"That each branch may thus occasionally make errors for which there may be no effective remedy is one of the prices we pay for this independence.

A trifling annoyance can go round and round and develop into a major entanglement between midnight and seven in the morning.

When something has to be done, we usually find a way to do it.
