Adam C. Powell Meets The Press

Former N. Y. Solon Falls Ill Before Address

By SAMUEL BRIGGS
Managing Editor

Newspaper people from all over the state, about 45 or 50 of us, squeezed into the room set up in the Information Services Building at Duke University last Monday for a press conference with the one and only Adam Clayton, "Soul Brother" Powell.

The invitation had read 12 noon, but due to bad flying weather and the technicalities of chartering a plane from Tallahassee, Florida, Adam arrived around 3:30 p.m.

With a police escort from the airport and a dozen or so more city and campus policemen waiting at the University's main entrance Adam was well protected.

Getting out of the car which had brought him to the campus the unseated Harlem congressman was all smiles. Deeply tanned, smoking a cigar, walking slowly in the beautiful warm spring sunshine with an almost deliberate swagger, Powell gave the appearance of a king who did not think himself too high to spend time with his subjects and allow them to bask in the sunlight of his image. Strangely, no one seemed to resent this man's cool, casual and sometimes regal air... for this is somehow expected of him, his trademark. This is Adam.

Supreme Court Urged to Bar Housing Bias

WASHINGTON — The United States Supreme Court was urged Monday, April 1 to bar all discrimination in housing.

The appeal involves Joseph Lee Jones, a Negro and his wife who sued the developers of the Paddock Woods subdivision in suburban St. Louis refusing on racial grounds to sell them a house and lot.

The couple contend that open housing is the law of the land under an 1866 civil rights law implementing the abolition of slavery. The law said: "All citizens of the United States shall have the same right, in every state and territory, as is enjoyed by white citizens thereof, to inherit, purchase, See HOUSING 5A

Rep. Jas. Gorman Calls For Action At D. C. Meeting

WASHINGTON, D. C. — America must tear down all artificial barriers to success for the Negro if it expects to survive as a free democracy, Rep. James C. Gorman (D. Calif.) said yesterday (April 1).

He told 200 delegates to the third annual Social Action Conference of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, AFL-CIO, that "we must tackle the balance of segregation in education, strike a death blow to segregation in housing and eliminate job discrimination if we are to have a decent life in America to pass on to the next generation.

"The country cannot survive in its present form if it continues to pursue its present course."

Corman, a member of President Johnson's National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorder, made his remarks after IUE President Paul Jennings called upon his union to "coldly and honestly analyze the problems of America, examine the question of priorities and explore our total responsibility to solve those problems."

Carl Coleman, administrative assistant to Mayor-Commissioner Walter E. Washington of Washington, D. C., welcomed IUE delegates to the Nation's Capital and urged more Americans "to face urban dialogue, more objectivity, more honesty and more action."
