

Former Ohio Newsboy Wins Acting Laurels

NEW YORK — It wasn't so long ago that Ernie Wheelwright and Tom Scott sold copies of the "Columbus Dispatch" outside the main entrances to the Ohio capital city's Neil House and Deshler Hilton (now the Beasley Deshler) hotels. They're still friends. Wheelwright, as most football fans know, is the famed star of the National Football League Atlanta Falcons. Scott is an actor and a good one, on TV, in films and on stage.

But these two successful young men have not forgotten their hometown ties of earlier days and the people who—in one way or another—gave them encouragement, help and advice on the way up.

Whenever they return to "home" for a visit, they always stop by the circulation department of the Dispatch to see and chat with the newspaper's manager for street sales, Gus Kavados, their boss when they were newsboys.

Kavados was a great help and inspiration to the boys when they were growing up, his two well-known "protéges" say.

Wheelwright is one of the outstanding fullbacks in professional football, his record speaking for itself. Less is known about the second former newsboy, Tom Scott, even though he too, has made a great success out of life.

Scott has a fine reputation in New York as a skilled actor and singer. He is in demand, too, for the less glamorous but important job called the "voice-over"—a voice, often off-camera, selling advertised products on TV.

At present, he is appearing in an on-camera segment of a man-in-the-street interview commercial in behalf of the Esso tiger (the one "in the tank"). The famous cat is currently doing battle with his sponsor's ad manager, who keeps saying—in the commercials, anyway—that the tiger should be fired.

The son of Bernard Scott of 476 North Monroe Avenue, Columbus, Tom made his debut in professional show business on a "traffic court" program carried by a Columbus television station.

Since arriving in New York, he has appeared on many Manhattan-originated TV shows. He created the roles of Dr. Scott Evans for the ABC-TV "A Time For Us" and of Frazer on CBS-TV's "Guiding Light." He made about 20 appearances on "The Patty Duke Show" and has been seen on "Look Up And Live," "The Defenders" and "Coronet Blue," among others.

Tom has had roles in several U. S. Navy films, in MGM's "Mr. Buddwing," in Universal International's "Mirage," and he played the starring role in the Louis De Rochemont production "What's In It For Me."
