

N.C. Patrol Seeking Applicants For Basic Training School

RALEIGH — The North Carolina State Highway Patrol is seeking applicants for a basic training school which will begin September 8th at the University of North Carolina's Institute of Government at Chapel Hill.

Major E. W. Jones, who heads the Patrol's Training and Inspection Division, says there are openings for 40 men in the 14 weeks of school.

"The basic school," said Major Jones, "includes a comprehensive survey of all areas of traffic control and law enforcement. The instruction is by experts in each field and cover a myriad of topics from pursuit driving to public relations."

On July 1 the Patrol's authorized strength will increase by 50 men to 877. The increase in personnel was approved by the 1967 General Assembly. The legislators provided for 75 men the first year of the biennium and 50 the second.

In order to qualify for employment by the Patrol, a young man must be between 21-30 years of age, a U. S. citizen with a high school diploma, 5 feet, 9 1/2 inches tall, 160 pounds and be able to pass a rigid physical and mental examinations.

"We have modified one of the physical requirements," Major Jones said. "It is now possible for a young man with 20-40 vision to join the Patrol. Of course, this deficiency must be corrected to 20-20 with glasses or contact lens."

The Patrol officer said interested applicants can get additional information by contacting the local district first Sergeant or by writing directly to Patrol Headquarters, Motor Vehicles Building, Raleigh.

Smith was born in Brooklyn, and is a graduate of The Cooper Union in New York City. He has maintained his own jewelry shop in Greenwich Village in New York and has lectured on the art of craftsmanship at many universities. The collection, which will include about 300 objects, is sponsored by the Johnson company. It is expected to be completely assembled by 1969 and will tour museums and campuses in an effort to "stimulate wider interest" in the crafts, Mr. Johnson said.

Health Board Names Physical Therapy Chief

RALEIGH — Dr. Jacob Koomen, State Health Director, announced today the appointment of Miss Anne Parrish as Chief of the Physical Therapy Section at the State Board of Health. "Miss Parrish is eminently qualified to assume leadership for this important public health program," Dr. Koomen said.

A native of Franklin County, Miss Parrish attended Meredith College and received a B. S. degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She received her certificate in Physical Therapy from the University of Wisconsin and has been with the North Carolina State Board of Health for more than 15 years.

The Physical Therapy Section will provide consultation, training and direct services in a number of public health programs, such as Crippled Children's services, Chronic Diseases and Home Health Care.

While in Washington, members of the committee, headed by Attorney James L. Cobb, President of The Washington Bar Association, visited Resurrection City and were welcomed by Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who took them on tour of the site. The Attorneys, here from various parts of the United States, expressed enthusiasm over the high morale among residents of Resurrection City.

Judge Billy Jones further said "We want the Reverend Abernathy and his supporters to know that colored lawyers all over the nation are with them. We have been going to court, and we have obtained some privileges for our people through non-direct action. Now that they are in direct action, we are here to offer all possible legal help."

"When Dr. Martin Luther King began direct action, we knew it could achieve some ends. This is why the National Bar Association is all out to back the Poor People's Campaign," continued Judge Jones.
