

N. Y. Symphony Awarded Grant To Train Black Orchestra Players

NEW YORK—The Symphony of the New World of New York City has received a grant of $103,500 from the Ford Foundation to increase its training of talented black orchestral players, it was announced this week. The orchestra already is composed of up to 40 per cent nonwhite members.

The grant, which is for two years, will be used to create a string ensemble of eight young musicians, most of whom will be Negroes. The ensemble will train with the orchestra and give concerts in schools, mainly in areas with large black population.

"Although Negroes have long been prominent in jazz, popular, and vocal music, there are too few examples of their participation in the symphony orchestra, and particularly in the stringed sections," said W. McNeil Lowry, Foundation vice president for the Humanities and the Arts.

"A practical reason for this is that the Negro youngster is usually not able to acquire the expensive early training, or the years of practice in adequate space at home, that are necessary to produce a first-rate string player. Yet the Symphony of the New World has managed to assemble an orchestra that is heavily nonwhite and has placed several members in other orchestras anxious for black representa-

CALENDAR OF FACT

The Portland, Oregon, Traffic Safety Commission stated that emotional upsets have a direct effect on safe driving ability. You are driving under a definite handicap when you are upset, depressed, angry or even overjoyed. The defensive driver's way of coping with this problem is to wait until he calms down before taking the wheel.

Mr. Thomas M. Goodfellow, president of the Association of American Railroads, has announced that the railroad industry has pledged full support to the JOBS program of the National Alliance of Businessmen. Reaffirming the railroad's policy of affording equal employment opportunity, the AAR board of directors unanimously adopted a resolution supporting the new NAB program.

Harris School Dedication Set For Sunday

The new R. N. Harris Elementary School, located on Cooper and Bacon Streets will be formally dedicated on Sunday October 13, 1968 at 3:00 P. M. The ultra modern, split-level school is a fitting memorial to the late R. N. Harris, for whom it was named.

Harris was a well-known insurance executive, having served as vice president and secretary-manager of the Bankers Fire Casualty Company.

The completely air-conditioned school, located on a 20-acre tract on the north-west corner of Cooper and Bacon Streets, was first used to conduct a summer school program during the summer of 1968. It consists of 14 classrooms, an ultra modern library, a gymnasium, a cafeteria, a teachers' lounge and an administrative office suite.

The school year 1968-1969 marked the beginning of the first full term as an elementary school. The principal, Spencer A. Wynne, states that the faculty consists of the following: Eleven full time classroom teachers, one special reading teacher, one full time librarian, one full time counselor, one part time music teacher, one part time speech therapist, one part time public health nurse, a home school coordinator, a secretary and one clerical teacher aide.

In addition to the regularly scheduled personnel, professional services are provided by the following: an art supervisor, a physical education supervisor, a psychiatrist, a social worker, and a psychologist.

The public is invited to attend the dedication services.

FOOD SERVICE SCHOOL SET FOR DUKE U. OCT. 16

Duke University will host several hundred food service personnel from seven Durham institutions at a Food Service School to be conducted Oct. 16-18 in coordination with the Durham County Health Department.

Workers from Watts, McPherson, Lincoln, Veterans Administration and Duke Hospital are expected to attend together with members of dining hall and food service staffs of North Carolina College and Duke University.

The three-day event was arranged to offer instruction to food handlers on safer methods of preparing and serving food.

Theme of this year's program will be "Health Through Sanitation Education," according to Frank H. Barr, chief sanitarian of the Durham County Board of Health and Theodore Minah, director of Duke Dining Halls, co-hosts.

TV INDUSTRY INFLUENCED BY TARZAN IMAGE--DIXON

As this article is being written, television's New Season is making its debut and this year, more than any other in the medium's history, black faces will abound during prime time on the tube. One network boasts that 15 out of its 25 programs will have Black regulars.

No, one can deny that this is progress, but many Hollywood personalities, both Black and white, are less than bubbling over with enthusiasm as they assess television's "new image."

One of the most articulate of these is actor Ivan Dixon, who recently took time from his co-starring role in the "Hogan's Heroes" series to guest star as an athlete dedicated to helping underprivileged youngsters in Universal's "Ironside."

"Of course, there will be lots more faces," says Dixon, "but it still isn't necessarily representative in terms of our contribution to this society, in terms of our sheer numbers or of our involvement in this country."

"The industry does feel a need to project Black images, but they don't really know how. It's kind of confusing on the parts of film producers basically because they still don't really comprehend what and where we really are.

"Everything they think regarding us is influenced by the past 50 to a hundred years of negative images projected in films and TV and negative opinions of Black people generally that exists in this country now.

"They're still being influenced by Tarzan and The Great White Hunter and that's why we now have so much of the Super Negro image. I don't think the current stuff is as progressive as it could be at this point and I feel the new stereotype is in many ways as negative as the old."

However, granted that this may be true, what would Dixon put in its place if he had the power to change things? "I'd put simple, honest images of Black human beings in Black situations -- Black human situations. These situations exist without regard to color.
