

Career Project At Shaw Begins To Pay Benefits

RALEIGH — As the result of a Ford Foundation grant to Shaw University, totalling $1,221,372.00 that is scheduled to be utilized over a four-year period to partially support operations of an administrative nature, a Career Placement Office, which is less than three months old, has been established.

According to Paul Walker, Director of the operation, "The Office of Career Placement seeks to assist students in making a career decision based on a full appreciation of their potential growth, whether on a job or in a graduate or professional school." Walker said, "We intend to fulfill the final stage of The Shaw Plan of Education—that of Placement.

In order to do this, we shall provide the most effective pre-planned and immediate delivery systems for graduate study and occupational placement for prospective graduates and alumni."

Activities of Career Placement were previously centered in the Office of the Dean of Students. Some functions were delegated to various offices and/or departments to insure as much operational activity in this area as possible. These functions have not been completely centered in the new unit as yet, and there is still extensive need for communication of its purpose, formulation of specific programs, and clear delineation of internal duties and functions. These problems are being slowly worked out.

The offices is staffed by two administrators: Walker, who comes to Shaw after employment with the now famous Opportunities Industrialization Center, Inc., the federally funded organization that has been so successful in training and finding meaningful employment for the "less rich" in American society.

Hong Kong Flu Hits WSSC At Christmas Holidays Recess

The Hong Kong flu bug—or one of its equally devastating cousins—bit Winston-Salem State College just before the Christmas recess.

Class attendance dropped to almost nothing at times, feverish faculty members coughed and groaned for days at a time, nursing school classrooms became makeshift hospital wards and the academic machinery ground to a near halt as penicillin and aspirin replaced the normal oil of intellectual give and take.

It started a week and a half before classes were scheduled to end for Christmas on Dec. 18. Students began reporting to the infirmary with headaches, fevers and high temperatures.

Within several days about 100 students were confined in the infirmary, which normally holds less than two dozen. Over 400 students had been treated as outpatients, and there were almost certainly others who simply took some aspirin and went to bed without bothering to consult the campus doctor. Enrollment at Winston-Salem State is 1,300.

A year's supply of drugs was exhausted almost immediately and quickly replenished. Several of the college nurses caught the bug themselves, and for a time student nurses performed a large portion of the duties in the infirmary.

Judge Ends Interracial Marriage

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Blonde actress May Britt, 31, was granted an uncontested divorce from Negro entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., 43, Thursday after testifying that in their seven-year marriage: "There was no family life to speak of." "I asked him many times to stay home more, but he never did," Miss Britt testified in Santa Monica Superior Court. The divorce, granted by Superior Court Judge Laurence J. Rittenband, ended the interracial marriage which rocked Hollywood on Nov. 13, 1960. Davis and the Swedish actress separated Nov. 1, 1967. Both had been married once before. The couple has a daughter, Tracey, 7 1/2, and two adopted sons, Mark, 8, and Jeff, 4. Under the property settlement, Miss Britt receives a total of $3,000 a month in alimony and child support. In her testimony, Miss Britt said Davis had made her "terribly upset." "The extremely few times he is home, he has not much time for the family," she said.
