Carr In Full Swing

By JANICE DIXON AND RANDY RAY

Carr Junior High has really gotten into full swing for the school year. The football team finished the year with only two losses. The basketball team predicts even greater success. Carr's first game of the basketball season is against Martin Junior High of Raleigh.

Not long ago the Student Council officers were elected for the school year. Chosen for president was Theodore Ashford and Ricky Weaver was elected as vice-president.

Carr's Civics classes played quite an important part in the sociological activities of the community. Directing these classes is teacher Lawrence Thompson. Randy Ray, Steve Paschal, Kenneth Redding and Calvin Norman, four of the better ninth grade students of Carr, were sent for a day, to the City Hall to visit and learn about the government of our city. After their visit, they spoke to the classes, telling about their experiences.

On November 14, Carr had its first sock-hop. Over two hundred people were there, making it a big event.

The Carr Chorus has also given its first performance. The chorus is directed by Mrs. Vivian Thorpe.

This year at Carr promises to be very exciting. There is cooperation between fellow students and the faculty. The faculties primary goal is to meet the needs of the students on their individual level.

FLORAL PRINT JUMPSUIT sleeves with white cuffs. Barrel collar with bow and long pants.

BRIGHT GOLD BONDED ORLON skirt has novel chain suspenders held with coins in button holes. Attached white dacron and cotton voile blouse has lace edging around collar and wrist length sleeves.

Colored Toy Factory Marks 1st Anniversary

(See pictures first section)
 LOS ANGELES, Cal. — The Shindana Toy Factory, Los Angeles, Calif., celebrated its first anniversary with the announcement that sales will reach the $1,000,000 mark within the next six months.

A year ago, Shindana started production of a black doll called Baby Nancy. Within one year, over 130,000 Baby Nancy Dolls have been sold to white and black children across the country.

Shindana is now manufacturing a soft body doll named Dee Bee and is planning to introduce three new black dolls by the end of 1970: Among them is the Malaika doll (Swahili for "angel") with Afro features and accessories.

The Shindana factory is a division of Operation Bootstrap, the black community training and economic development organization headquartered in Los Angeles' black community.

Bob Hall, co-director of Operation Bootstrap, said, "Our national distribution is very good. Baby Nancys can be bought in every state and at all major department stores."

"The consumer demand for black dolls in foreign countries has been so great that Shindana will start exporting Baby Nancy and Dee Bee dolls to Europe, New Zealand, Australia, and Japan," said Hall.
