Former Times Editor Replaces L. E. Austin As Principal Speaker At ECSU Sunday Feb. 22

79th Founder's Day Observed On Sun. Feb. 22

Replacing Louis Austin publisher of the Carolina Times who is ill, Clathan M. Ross, formerly editor of the Times and now Information Officer and Program Director of Voice of America, addressed the 79th Founder's Day program at Elizabeth City State University February 22.

After speculating on some of the possible motives of High Cal, the Negro Representative from Pasquotank County who introduced the bill that led to the establishment of what is now Elizabeth City State University, Ross stated, "And so, almost 100 years later, we find ourselves faced with the necessity of searching for appropriate values, values that are relevant to the needs of our times, of making the right selection and then of applying that choice as did Cal."

Ross explained that Negroes have taken a glimpse down the long corridor of racial integration and have concluded "that unless some modifications are made in the approach, Negroes are doomed to lose their identities, to lose themselves. He called that a fate no man can suffer."

Stressing a belief in the value of the cultural approach to the issue of race relations, the ECSU Founders Day speaker felt that, "Perhaps it will equip us both -- black and white -- to understand the essential humanity of each of us."

The historic observance at ECSU began with a luncheon, at 1 p.m. in the banquet room of the University Center. Following the luncheon, representatives from the University, alumni, and community joined the Annual Pilgrimage to Oak Grove Cemetery where (See ROSS page 2A)

Blacks Only People Originally Brought Here Against Will

"The black colleges must continue to be the doorway of opportunity for the able and talented black youth while at the same time providing for other black youth of unrealized potential the only real chance he is likely to get." These were the words of Dr. Edward Brice, president, Warner and Warner International Associates, Inc., as he spoke to the St. Augustine's College audience February 22 during the 103rd Founder's Day activities.

"Today, it has become fashionable to refer to black college presidents and founders of early black social institutions as 'Uncle Toms,' he continued. "At least these men understood the importance of a college education in liberating the minds of the blacks," Brice concluded.

Durham NAACP Gets Blistering Challenge From Youth Advisor

Rev. L.H. McDonald Sunday Keynoter At Kyles Temple

The Rev. L. H. McDonald, pastor, Northside Baptist Church and advisor to the Youth Council, NAACP, Durham Business College, delivered a blistering attack upon the inept program of the Durham Branch, NAACP, at its monthly meeting, held at Kyles Temple A.M.E. Zion Church, 4 p.m., Sunday, February 22.

With approximately one hundred persons present the speaker, in the words of a song in the late 40s told the adult members of the organization "they need to straighten up and fly right". He went into every phase of the community life of black people in Durham and critically, yet constructively, outlined a program that would not only make the youth interested, but would lure more adults into the fold, to aid in the struggle for human rights.

He began by saying that the NAACP revels in telling what it has done to aid the cause of freedom he described this as a matter of history and should be recorded so that posterity would know about it. He called for action now. He told his audience the youth were told you are still youth and you will be treated accordingly (See NAACP page 2A)
