

The Handwriting On The Wall

The proverbial battle of the sexes has taken on a new twist it seems. In England, four hundred angry women met in a two-day conference to lay plans for a revolution against men.

Those militant shrews, who publish a magazine by the same name, are calling for a change in the way society is organized so that men and women can both work and share in raising children. That is what they say, but what they really mean is that they want to trade places with men; women want to take over.

We are tempted to say, I told you so. In the Holy Writ there is a warning that says: "whatsoever a man sows, so shall he reap." Well men, you have sown the seeds that are now about to blossom into a full-fledged rebellion.

Years ago, men copped out. They gave up their responsibilities of being the authoritative heads of society, and gradually turned everything over to the women. Men birthed and nurtured the perverted concept that women are superior to men. Men told women that the females can outthink the males. It was a man who wrote "The Female of the Species is Deadlier Than the Male." It was man who elevated woman to a pedestal and practically defied her. Over the years, men have gradually let women assume more and more authority that is completely out of her spectrum, and now the taste of unnatural power has created a hunger for unnaturalness in women. They are preparing to move into the void created when men abdicated their rightful place in society.

Just what does this proposed revolution portend for the future? First of all, look for more dominance on the part of females. More and more women are going to begin competing for more and better jobs, making more and more money. Look for a change in fashion, presaged by the culottes. Women are going to begin literally as well as figuratively wearing the pants. Men, on the other hand, are going to revert to the style of the Scots. Expect to see an increase in baby-sitter jobs for men. As the trend of societal perversion reaches its peak. Do not be surprised to see some enterprising female doctor come up with a method by which men can bear children so the woman can keep her year-round job.

What does this all mean. It merely is a sign of the times that we as a people are sinking deeper and deeper into the cesspool of decadence.

What Does It All Mean?

MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSINT' These strange words were written several thousand years ago on the capitol city wall of a great worldwide kingdom. Translated, the cryptic message read: "God has numbered your kingdom and finished it. You are weighed in the balance and are found wanting. Your kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians."

Originally this message was sent to the sprawling kingdom of Babylon, which as the historical record points out went down to defeat just as the mysterious messenger described. Updated just slightly, this same message could apply to America today.

This kingdom has indeed been numbered and finished. The stench of our immorality, crime and general decadence rises to high heaven. We have taken this good land, in many ways the richest in the world, and polluted it beyond hope for an immediate reversal, and as a people we have sunk to depths of depravity unknown in the annals of history.

Truly, the scales are against us! Our own record indicts us. With our advanced technology we spend the money on one bomber that could serve to make 50,000 tractors. We lie, steal, and pillage at home while sending missionaries to preach righteousness to peoples of foreign lands. We sacrifice, alienate and betray our greatest natural resource, our young people while playing big brother to the remainder of the world.

A house divided against itself cannot stand. And our house is truly divided. The blacks against the whites, the havenots against the haves, the young against the old. We are a poor people split into many pockets of rebellion while fooling ourselves that we are the United States.

The picture is indeed bleak, and the mysterious hand writes our doom. Unless we turn from our pernicious ways, future generations will view our history in perspective and wonder: "How could a nation so great fall so low?"

Mob Upholds This Supremacy

The doctrine of white supremacy is easy to understand. It simply teaches that any person with white skin is superior to any person whose skin isn't white.

Yesterday, the doctrine of white supremacy was upheld by a mob in a place called Lamar, S. C. The United Press International reported that "state police used tear gas and clubs Tuesday to beat back a howling mob of whites, armed with axe handles and baseball bats, when they attacked buses bringing Negro children to a once-white school." The United Press International story reported:

"The mob tried to stop the first bus to arrive but failed. Its four passengers, all black were hustled inside the school by troopers as one white shouted, 'You want nigger grandchildren?'"

"The second bus, with 20 blacks, and the third bus, with 15, were effectively blocked by the mob when whites climbed atop their hoods and ripped out the ignition wires.

"The mob surged into the line of patrolmen, attacking them with ax handles and pounding on the buses. The troopers, their own clubs flying, donned gas masks and fired tear gas into the mob.

"Several patrolmen boarded the buses in a hail of bricks and rocks and escorted the children, choking and crying, into the school. Minutes later the whites rushed again and overturned two empty buses, then fled when patrolmen fired more tear gas and, for the first time, brandished their pistols."

A supremacy which can be demonstrated only by a howling mob attacking children is on shaky foundations.

But, it should be noted that the state troopers who fought to save the Negro children were white men, and that they were sent there by a white governor, who termed the attacks "unspeakable." It is in order to hope that the actions of the white troopers and the white governor will at least provide a counterweight to what the white mob did.

The View From Here

By MILTON JORDAN Times Staff Writer

This week, we are concerned with the first of three ultimately important questions in regard to observing the rules that lead to happy marriages. Am I Ready? This question and the correct answer to it is the cornerstone as it were to deciding this question of marital happiness. One's answer, however, must be objective and honest.

Just what is readiness for marriage? One major factor is age! Couples are walking down the aisle earlier and earlier in life. Statistics show that today forty percent of the brides in the United States are between fifteen and eighteen years of age. That's much, much too young as follow-up statistics prove. In the first place, of all those teenage marriages, forty percent had to occur because the girls were already pregnant. Fifty percent of teen-age marriages ended in divorce within five years, and a great many of the other couples simply lived with their misery. So if you are a teenager, and looking for the answer to the question of readiness for marriage, the reply is a resounding No!!

But by the same token, if you are a teenager you can learn what being ready is and start preparing for a successful marriage. Again, I ask, just what is readiness? Following age, the next singularly important factor is maturity. Webster defines maturity as: "The state or quality of being mature; ripeness; perfection; completeness; as, the maturity of age or of judgement..." (Webster's Universal Unabridged Dictionary). As is suggested by the above definition, maturity comes in four stages. First of all physical. Being physically mature is not reason enough to get married; This is where many people make mistakes initially. Truthfully, being physically mature without having reached the other three plateaus of completeness is often the best reason in the world not to get married. The second stage of maturity is mentally. This is involved with education somewhat, but more or less refers to one's ability to think and reason logically and objectively. A test of mental maturity is how well can you plan?

Dating for instance is one of today's worst evils, and one of the most bitter indignities against the lack of maturity. Dates are no longer planned; they just happen. For the most part, a date is involved with two kids (chronologically or mentally) alone in a car or in the balcony of a theater, losing themselves in the mesmerizing glare of a ready made daydream on the silver screen. Conversation is often a spasmodic monotone, and character development absolutely nil. On the average date today the dating couple seldom is ever learn anything constructive about each other. They are almost like two animals pawing and clawing at each other for various types of advantages.

However, if a young man of a young woman sincerely wants to test their mental maturity, plan a constructive, educational fun date. First of all, look around for someone you think would be able to function in the type of situation. That in itself is a whooper of a mental challenge. When you find a possible candidate, with him or her in mind, plan a date. Select a place to go that will be enjoyable, educational, and healthy. But alas, that automatically rules out all the places frequented by a majority of young people today. Clubs are not educational necessarily, and they are definitely not healthy. Cigarette smoke is thick enough to cut. And if you don't believe cigarette smoke is unhealthy, visit some of the hospital cancer wards. Or talk with some guy who had a two-pack a day habit and now has to breathe through a tube in his throat because all of one lung and most of the other one is eaten away by cancer inducing nicotine. Another health hazard in the average club is the volume of the "music" (3/4). Prominent specialists in their fields declare that if young people continue to listen to that nerve-racking din they call music at their favorite audio levels, most of them will be deaf before thirty and all of them will have impaired hearing. So clubs are out.

Using the guidelines of fun (the kind you never regret) education and health, one can easily rule out most movies. What does it profit to slouch on your spine for two hours or more and bombard your mind with visions of Mayhem, destruction, illicit sex and other types of social evils? In the same way that your arm will become useless and eventually wither away if tied behind you for any length of time, your mind will also rot from lack of use or misuse. Though there are good movies and television shows, they are far and in between. And there are many other things that are much more fun on a date.

Simply by the process of elimination, it is readily seen that to test your mental maturity requires that you be different from the crowd. If you are able, even willing to be different, then you are well on the way to mental maturity.

Next Week - Let's Plan A Date.

Answers To Income Tax Questions

This column of questions and answers on Federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

QUESTION: Is insurance compensation for injuries received in an auto accident taxable?

Answer: No, compensation for injuries suffered in an accident are tax free.

QUESTION: There is a mistake on the label that came on my tax package. How should I correct it?

Answer: Make a correction in name and address on the label itself. If the Social Security number is wrong, cross out the number on the label and enter the correct number in the box provided at the top of the form.

Put the corrected label on the return you file so that your return will be properly identified and the need correction can be made in IRS records.

"HOW TO LIVE WITHOUT FEAR"
"SPIRITUAL LIFE"

To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and Peace. - Romans 8:6
By REV. B. A. MACK

We live on a physical plane as far as our senses are concerned, our smell, our taste, our hearing, our sight, and our touch are the physical body. But we are not just flesh alone, we are a spirit also.

Man is not made to be successful by living only on the physical level because the whole world is covered with the curse of sin, disease, and fear. If we choose to live on the physical level we are defeated. It is only when we recognize that we are spiritual and that our very being and our sustenance depend upon the Spirit of God, that we can face this world with victory.

God's plan for abundant living tells us that we don't have to submit to all the weaknesses of the flesh. We don't have to look with frustration upon bad situations in our personal lives which seem to destroy us. We can find answers to these problems which could bring happiness in our daily lives. Christ can that we may have life and peace, spiritually and physically).

Making Black Count

THIS IS A CENSUS year—the one time in a decade that all Americans are counted. In a few weeks you, like everyone else, will be getting a questionnaire from the Census Bureau to fill out.

As soon as you get it, fill it out and mail it back. It's important, especially for black people. In 1960, the Census Bureau estimated it "missed" at least two million black people—ten percent of the total black population.

They were never counted. As a result the black community lost five seats in Congress and several billion dollars in federal aid.

Why weren't blacks counted? In part, because some people didn't bother returning the form, or because some people didn't answer the door when the census taker came.

But sometimes he just never came. Black neighborhoods were the scene of hit and run census taking. They'd come for a fast spin around the block and then cut out without making a complete survey.

"How Many Blacks Live Here?"

In Southern rural areas it was common for the census taker to stop by at the local general store and ask the owner: "How many black folk live down the road?"

Discrimination, not ignorance, kept two million blacks from being counted in 1960; we can't afford to let it happen again. The Urban League and a dozen other major organizations covering the whole spectrum of opinion in the civil rights movement have launched a campaign to make sure that black counts this year.

It's a two-part program. One part is to educate black people to the importance of filling out and mailing in the census forms. The other part is to keep tabs on the Bureau and make sure they don't cheat blacks again.

We want them to recruit census-takers from the black community, train census takers for ghetto counting, open offices in the ghetto so that people can get assistance in filling out the forms, and above all, make an accurate count of blacks for the first time in our history.

Black people will have to help. Aside from filling out forms mailed directly to us, we'll have to inform others of the importance of doing so, too.

Census Bureau Doesn't Care

The Census Bureau doesn't care about the information supplied by individuals. It can't use it in any way other than in compiling statistics. By law, they can't give this information to the police, welfare or housing authorities, or anyone else. In fact, once they feed the forms into the computers, you're just a number.

But there is power in numbers. If there is a true count of the numbers of blacks in an inner city ghetto, that neighborhood may get an extra Congressman and state representatives, offices that are now held by whites from fully-counted areas.

Your school may get more aid, and there may even be a new school built simply because the Census reports will show more people than local officials thought lived there.

The black community lost $650 million in federal money for vocational training alone because of the 1960 undercount. And that's just one federal program. There are hundreds more. Once the poll is finished, legislative districts all over the country will be redrawn to take account of population changes. The more blacks that are counted, the more seats for black neighborhoods.

Some people foolishly warn against taking part in the count, thinking it's some kind of genocide plot. Well, not taking part in the census amounts to racial suicide. It means insuring that blacks get less of everything they are entitled to.
