Continuing, Cordice said: "Elaboration of how meaningful community participation in health care can be achieved was the primary purpose of this conference. It was our hope that in so doing we would contribute to the development and clarification of national health policy."

Ramsey Clark, former Attorney General of the United States, in a special address Thursday afternoon, discussed the current national climate and how it affects possibilities of meaningful community participation in health and other social services.

Others included in the list of twenty-eight speakers drawn from public officials, community leaders, and health and other professions included Brooklyn Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm, Dr. Edgar Cahn, director of the Citizens Advocate Center and editor of "Our Brother's Keeper, the Indian in White America."

The annual health conference is an activity of the New York Academy of Medicine, a 125 year old independent fellowship of physicians and scientists. Each spring, the Academy, under the auspices of its Committee on Medicine in Society, conducts a conference to review important health care problems of public concern. The meetings attract a national audience interested in and involved with health care programs.

Last Rites Held For Sgt. Eugene Paul Gee in Oxford

Last rites were held Sunday, April 12, at 2:00 p.m. at First Baptist Church, Oxford, for Sgt. Eugene Paul Gee, of the Rev. C. L. Faison delivering the Eulogy.

Sgt. Eugene Paul Gee, son of the late Summel and Rose Boone Gee, was born in Baltimore, Maryland, April 1, 1946. He attended the public schools of Baltimore until he reached the fifth grade. After the death of his mother he lived with relatives in Garysburg, N. C. and later he moved to Oxford and was rearred by Mrs. Willis B. Gibson, who loved, him as her own son.

Joining the First Baptist Church of Oxford, he became dutiful in his attendance and active in the services of the Youth of the Church.

In August, 1969 he married his high school sweetheart, Miss Judy Carolyn Wortham, of Oxford and Washington D. C.

He completed his high school work at Mary Potter School and was in his senior year at A. and T. University when he was called in the service. He later entered the NCO Training School at Fort Benning, Georgia thereafter attaining the rank of Sergeant.

After three weeks of service in the war zone he met his death.

MISS SUGGS Church Musician Receives Special Recognition Sunday

Miss Gloria Jean Suggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Suggs of 804 Dunbar Street received special recognition Sunday morning during the regular 11:00 a.m. worship services by the pastor, officers and members of the congregation of Lincoln Memorial Baptist Church on Roxboro Street, in observance of Choir Day.

Miss Suggs was recognized for devoted interest she has taken in the music department. A choir of more than 36 voices walked sacredly down the aisle Easter Sunday morning wearing beautiful white robes with red collars. All of which Miss Suggs made herself.

A wide selection of hymns and spirituals which they render to the service each Sunday morning adds inspiration and adoration to the worshippers of all ages.

Miss Suggs is a graduate of Hillside High School and is now a student at NCCU majoring in music. This is her third year.

Deacon Johnny Maers extended words of appreciation and Rev. Brodie, pastor made the presentation and encouraged Miss Suggs and the choir to keep on keeping on, confirming the words, We can do all things through Christ who strengthens us.
